LEYTE BATTLE NEARS END; JAP LINE SMASHED

Yanks Take Vast Stock of Guns.

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Philippines, Dec. 21 [Thursday] (AP).—The battle of Leyte Island is "rapidly drawing to an end," Gen. MacArthur said today, announcing the complete destruction of the Japanese Yamashita line on the northwest shoulder of the island.

His bulletin said:

"The 77th division, continuing its swift attack to the north, advanced four miles from Valencia and seized a road junction at Libungao, while at the same time the 1st cavalry division drove south from Lonoy three miles to seize Kanango, within a mile of the 77th division, thus completing destruction of the Yamashita line.

Japs Abandon 1,541 Dead.

"Our air force supported these ground operations. Enormous quantities of supplies of all categories were captured. It is estimated that they would have been basically sufficient for six months.

"The enemy abandoned 1,541 dead during the day. His cohesion now is completely broken and he is no longer capable of an integrated defense. The small remnants of his forces, divided into isolated groups, are able to resist temporarily only at independent points. Scattered elements are fleeing toward Palompon in an endeavor to reach the northwest coast of Leyte.

"The battle is rapidly drawing to an end."

Capture Arms Supply.

The huge stockpile of supplies seized on Leyte included artillery weapons, a vast store of small arms ammunition, many machine guns and grenades, a ton of land mines, and great quantities of food.

Explaining destruction of the Yamashita line, a spokesman said the so-called line was a series of defensive positions extending up the Ormoc highway and flanking the mountains. Capture of those positions constituted elimination of the line, the spokesman said.

American planes ranged far and wide again, damaging or destroying four freighters and six barges, and plastering enemy airdromes with bombs. Three American planes were lost in the operations.

No Fighting on Mindoro.

There was no enemy ground opposition on Mindoro, which American forces reinvaded without resistance last week. It was the fifth consecutive day in which no Mindoro opposition had been reported.

The enemy continued air harassing of the Americans on Mindoro, and lost nine planes by anti-aircraft fire, including five bagged by PT-boat gunners.

LOST IS FOUND, BUT THERE STILL AIN'T NO JUSTICE

Fairbury, Neb., Dec. 20 (AP).—Alfred Spitznogel, Newton precinct's missing newly elected justice of the peace, has been found. He's a real estate dealer—at Washington, Kas.

County Clerk Homer Brunk said today a telephone call from the Kansan last night cleared up the mystery of how a Nebraska precinct came to elect the Kansan who subsequently could not be identified as a Fairbury resident.

"Spitznogel had been up here making some real estate deals and the Republican caucus committee, as a joke, put him down as their nominee," Brunk said. "I don't suppose they expected he would win."

Brunk said the precinct would "get along without a justice of the peace."

Uninjured in War, He Gets Off on Wrong Foot in Hunt

Arnett, Okla., Dec. 20 (AP).—After two years of Mediterranean fighting in which he didn't receive a scratch, Sgt. Johnnie Trujillo came home on furlough, went hunting—and shot himself in the foot.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20.—Joan Berry today told a jury in Superior court here that never since she met Charles Chaplin in June, 1941, has she been intimate with any other man.

Thus, before the defense in the suit in which she charges Chaplin with the paternity of her 14 month old daughter gets a chance to present evidence that another man might be the father of the child, Miss Berry got in her denial.

The jury was told by Judge Henry M. Willis to disregard her statement as an unnecessary amplification of a reply to a question asked by Joseph Scott, attorney for Miss Berry and her child, but disregarded or not, it caused a mild flurry in the courtroom and wide comment. This is because Chaplin's attorneys have plainly indicated that they will seek to place the burden of parenthood on another man.

Leaves Little Unsaid.

Miss Berry, her comportment as demure as at her last courtroom appearance, took the stand at noon to tell the seven women and five men on the jury of her relations with Chaplin. Alternately flushed and pale, hesitant and trembling, she left little unsaid. She at times attempted to inject a certain delicacy in the proceedings, but white-haired Scott, 77 and adamant, was blunt.

Chaplin, silver-haired and hollow-eyed, had come and gone by the time his discarded protegee took the stand. He had occupied it all morning, his demeanor changed from that of the angry tycoon of yesterday to that of a spiritual man badly travestied by a silly young girl to whom he had tried to be "a best friend."

His Life "Open Book."

He called his life "an open book," altho he did not elaborate on the reasons why it was so widely known, told of threatening Miss Berry with the revelation "of all the other men in your life" if she persisted in suing him for paternity, and said the first he knew that she was facing motherhood was when she "broke into my home" to tell him that. He said she was gay and displayed a wedding ring. He again denied, of course, any responsibility in the matter.

Miss Berry, in turn, pictured Chaplin as a man "really sweet and affectionate," even after he had had her arrested for coming to see him, but as a man adamantly opposed to marriage. Even on the day she told him of her condition, she testified, he continued to be affectionate, kissing her tears away, and plainly indicating, by his suggestions, that his ardor had not cooled. But when she resisted his advances that day,

HISTORY OF AMERICA'S FOREIGN POLICY—VEST POCKET EDITION

BRITAIN TO PROVIDE MAIDS FOR HOMES IN EMERGENCY CASES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—A system of providing maids from hiring halls was inaugurated here tonight when Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin issued a defense regulation empowering local authorities to recruit a corps of "home helps."

Now, in the same way that district nurses can be called to any home in time of illness, the new service of "district maids" will be ready to help households where there is illness or any other emergency. The domestic helpers will be paid by local authorities, who will recover from the household served only as much of the cost of service as the family purse will permit, with the treasury making up the balance.

Women volunteering for the new plan will not be directed into compulsory war jobs unless they have specialized skills.

NEW ZEALANDER ADMITS AMERICA SAVED COUNTRY

LONDON, Dec. 20 [Reuters].—D. G. Sullivan, New Zealand minister of supply, who headed his country's delegation to the international civil aviation conference at Chicago and is now in London, said tonight that the opinion in New Zealand is that the Pacific war will not be over until 18 months to two years after the end of the German war.

Speaking of New Zealand's future relationship with Britain and the United States, Sullivan said, "While we still remain passionately loyal to Britain, it is inevitable that there should be a good deal of friendship for the United States, because the United States forces saved us from invasion by the Japanese.

"There was an agreed division of responsibilities in various parts of the world, and while Britain took the load in some areas, America shouldered it in others. Britain has done her full part, and more, in carrying her share."

'Marseillaise' Rings Again in Alsace School

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAVERNE, Alsace, Dec. 20.—Small boys filed into their classroom in an old building which once had been a Franciscan convent. A new instructor, beaming, greeted them.

On each desk was a song sheet. The lyrics were printed in a language few of these youngsters had ever read before. The tune was one they had not heard until a few weeks ago. The teacher ran a bow across the strings of his old fiddle and gestured to the boys to read and sing.

Catch Music's Spirit.

They started slowly, pronouncing the words phonetically and sometimes with guttural accents. Then suddenly the great martial lilt caught them and the chorus swelled. For the first time, these lads of Alsace sang "The Marseillaise."

After four years of German control and strict enforcement of measures to Nazify Alsace's educational system, French is again the language and the spirit of the curriculum. It was brought back to all the classrooms today. The teacher of arithmetic, two teachers of rhetoric, and the principal were back at their posts in the Saverne primary school after having refused for four years to work under the Germans.

The instructor in rhetoric had his boys act out sentences such as opening the window and walking across the room. Some of the phrases were strange, one lad using correctly the French verb "promener" for walk but the German word "zimmer" for room instead of the French "chambre."

Replies in English.

Asked his age in French, young Paul Kubach replied in English with a German accent, "I have 10 years."

The principal said the school had been closed the last few days while German textbooks were being carted away, the instructors who had cooperated with the Germans were being dismissed, and the transition back to French completed.

"When the Germans were here it was forbidden to speak French," he said, "and even in the Alsace patois of French and German such words as 'monsieur' and 'madame' could not be used.

"Adults overheard speaking French were sent to concentration camps and if a little boy used a French phrase in class his parents might suffer. The boys were not allowed to wear black berets because the enemy thought the headpieces were too distinctively French."

Among the French words which the youngsters had no difficulty picking up today were "chocolate" and "bonbons" and they asked American visitors for those delicacies. In several other respects these school boys were like school boys the world over. They knew in any language, for instance, that Christmas is near and that it means a vacation.

HIMMLER REPORTED DIRECTING DEFENSE IN ALSACE POCKET

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT U. S. 6TH ARMY GROUP HDQ., Dec. 19 [Delayed].—Heinrich Himmler, deputy fuehrer, believed in some quarters to be the master of Germany today, was reported to be personally directing resistance in the Colmar-Mulhouse pocket on the plain of Alsace.

One report said Himmler was rallying the Germans at the Neuf Breisach bridge over the Rhine, on the highway between Colmar and Freiburg in Germany. Another placed him in the Colmar citadel itself.

German resistance at Colmar has stiffened in the last few days and the allies are farther from taking that city than they were nearly a month ago when Gen. De Gaulle announced in Paris that his 1st army was at the gates of Colmar. Many Gestapo and SS [elite guard] troops have been moved into the pocket.

Fly Food to 16,000 Nazis on Islands in Channel

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—A bomber flying from Germany has delivered a cargo of food to 16,000 Nazi troops who have been isolated on the Channel Islands since the invasion of the continent June 6, the German radio said today. A pilot was quoted as saying, "It was the first time in five months that Guernsey, one of the main islands, had been visited by German pilots."

NEW INFANTRY WAVES BACK PANZERS; SMASH INTO BREACH OF HODGES' LINES

Failure to Detect Foe's Plans Goes Unexplained.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—The German counter-drive pushing American forces 20 miles back into Belgium and Luxemburg is recognized in official Washington as creating the most critical situation for the allies since the invasion of western Europe. Unless this attack shall be speedily overcome it may compel a large scale withdrawal of our forces along the whole front and stall the allied advance till next spring.

Officials close to Commander in Chief Roosevelt are optimistic of the outcome. They are confident the Germans will be stopped and eventually routed so disastrously as to hasten our victory, if not to bring the war to a speedy conclusion in the next few weeks. They look upon the German drive as the last forlorn gamble of a nation that knows it is defeated, recalling a similar desperate offensive by the Germans on the eve of asking an armistice in 1918.

Caught by Surprise.

How the Germans were able to surprise the American high command with this onslaught, the preparations for which required several weeks and the transfer of huge masses of troops from other parts of Germany, is a question around which the war department has thrown a wall of impenetrable secrecy. It is a question affecting the responsibility and ability of numerous American commanders, including some of the highest, and involving not only front line operations but the supply and equipment organization reaching back to the home front.

The censorship conceals not only the extent of the German attack and the causes of the surprise of our forces but the number of casualties, which there is reason to believe are unprecedented in number. While the secrecy is imposed ostensibly for "security reasons" it is operating to conceal official responsibility for our reverses.

No Explanation Offered.

If Gen. Eisenhower has furnished an explanation for the surprise of the forces under his command it has been suppressed. When the war department was asked today where the Germans got their attacking forces and how they were able to assemble them under the noses of the American commanders, it was stated that only commanders in the

G. I.S SHATTER FOUR BLOWS AT BELGIAN FUNNEL

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS HOLDING STAVELOT, Belgium, Dec. 20 (AP).—American doughboys backed by anti-tank guns repulsed four heavy German attacks today as the Nazis tried with armor and infantry to punch into this key Belgian town, a chief funnel into Belgium for their offensive forces.

The Germans thrusts climaxed a three day battle in which the Americans, thrown into the line to close the breach torn by German armor, drove the Nazis from the village street by street.

Surprised by the speed and power of the American counter-blow, the Germans have been trying with every shell they can throw to gain control of Stavelot, 25 miles southwest of Aachen.

North Flank Holds.

IN THE STAVELOT SECTOR, Belgium, Dec. 20 (AP).—American troops are suffering and inflicting their greatest single battle losses of the war on the western front.

This northern flank held firm today as a new series of German tank and infantry attacks shattered vainly trying to breach the positions held by the American veterans.

On the 60 mile front more American troops are involved in this struggle than in any single battle of the war. They are opposed by the most powerful punching force they have yet encountered.

The struggle thus far dwarfs the two other main American set-backs, at Kasserine pass in North Africa and at the Rapido river in Italy.

Fight Way Back.

This morning the Germans launched a series of violent attacks at points on a 20 mile front. These blows failed in piles of broken bodies and twisted metal. One American unit knocked out eight Panther and Tiger tanks in two hours.

Various units have fought their way back to this sector thru the German lines. One infantry unit returned in bits and pieces, but its losses were amazingly small considering that the group claimed to have killed 1,200 Germans. The unit had lost much of its equipment, except for rifles and bazookas.

Stops 60 Tanks.

Another mauled American formation, which bore the full fury of the Nazi assault, claimed to have stopped 60 German tanks in three days. But it, too, had lost a great deal of its artillery and motorized equipment.

An American anti-aircraft outfit was overrun by the Germans but escaped in trucks. Among those who escaped were Sgt. Will Onnerstitch, Big Rock, Ill., and Pvt. Donald Newell, Grand Haven, Mich.

The Nazis are using every trick ever tried in this war. In one instance they operated four American Sherman tanks, calling GI's to come up close for support and then opening fire on them with machine guns.

Roads Packed

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Dec. 20 (AP).—The roads immediately behind the German attacking front are lined bumper to bumper with enemy transport of every description, defended by quantities of anti-aircraft guns massed for this offensive, an American 9th air force flyer said tonight.

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Dec. 20 (AP).—The gigantic German counter-offensive is "the big thing" and is increasing steadily in fury, supreme headquarters said late tonight in lifting the blackout of news relating to the savage fighting on the United States 1st army front.

Fourteen to 15 German divisions—of which five or six are panzer (armored) divisions—are swarming into the breach of Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army's lines in Belgium and Luxemburg, it was disclosed.

Today fresh infantry waves were fighting behind the armored units which first smashed thru the American positions last Sunday. Headquarters said the German advances had made considerable progress with more to be expected.

Strive to Stem Drive.

Plans are being made to stem the onslaught, it was stated, but the feeling at this headquarters was that the situation would not be restored this week—or even next week.

[If at full strength, as seems likely for this carefully prepared German thrust, armored divisions would have about 10,000 men each and infantry up to 15,000, making a total force of up to 200,000 men in the first assault. No dispatches disclosed the nature or extent of the second wave just put into action.]

Appallingly bad weather today kept allied air forces on the ground, thus eliminating support which the American troops sorely needed.

Nazis Use Crack Troops.

Some of the panzer units spearheading the German drive are first class fighters, veterans of units which faced the allies at Caen, it was disclosed. They have been reorganized and refitted for this great do-or-die German counter-offensive and now are fresh and physically fit. The German infantry divisions are mostly made up of volks grenadiers, Hitler's home guard.

Crack American troops appeared to be stemming the onslaught at one point, but elsewhere the Nazi power gathered steadily, and a late Associated Press dispatch from the front said the situation along the entire 60 mile line was "both confused and serious."

Monschau, German town at the northern end of the enemy's assault, was recaptured by counterattacking Yank troops, who

News Black-out Partly Lifted

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES, Paris, Dec. 20 (AP).—As protests poured in from almost all the allied world over the suppression of news of German gains on the western front, supreme headquarters tonight pulled the curtain aside partly and promised a bigger view of the situation tomorrow.

The positions of the German and allied armies will in the future be made public once daily, it was announced—after a sufficient time lag to make sure the enemy will reap no benefit from the information.

24-48 Hour Time Lag.

This time lag is expected to be between 24 and 48 hours. Tomorrow's promised disclosures, therefore, will be of positions as they stood yesterday or today.

The supreme headquarters answer to critics of the news blackout has been that it was imposed on the basis of opinions of generals directing the fight and that the situation was so fluid that information of the whereabouts of German troops, even if it were days late, might help the enemy.

Asserts Army Making Mistake.

"In my opinion, the army is making a bigger mistake than it did in the Patton case [the incident of Lt. Gen. Patton's slapping a soldier in Sicily]," said George H. Lyon, OWI representative at supreme headquarters. "It is following a head in the sand policy. It could tell a great deal more without giving any information to the Germans."

Lyon said he was leaving for Washington, D. C., on Friday and would continue his campaign against news suppression there.

surrounded and presumably seized Nazi forces which had fought into the town. Monschau is 15 miles southeast of Aachen.

Main Drive at Stavelot.

Front dispatches, released in detail thru censorship for the first time, disclosed that the main German drive is being made in the region of Stavelot.

American tanks and tank destroyers were smashing at the side of the enemy salient just south of Stavelot and were reported to have made some progress.

Associated Press field correspondents said the enemy offensive was being likened to the final do-or-die punch thrown by the Germans in 1918, which had some initial success but later collapsed. An American officer asserted that if the present drive is crushed "the war can be won right here."

Relaxing its rigid censorship on news of the fighting, allied headquarters disclosed that the enemy's great Christmas offensive smashed into Belgium and Luxemburg at four points and that by Monday noon the initial impetus had carried the Nazi columns from five to 20 miles inside the two countries.

Towns in American Hands.

While there still was no delineation of the jagged and fluid fighting front tonight, it was announced that Stavelot remained in American hands, as well as St. Vith and Echternach, two other focal points of the enemy offensive. Several pockets of Americans were reported to have been surrounded near St. Vith, four miles inside Belgium and 10 miles south of Malmedy.

Fast units of "wildcat" German armor were reported striking thru the 1st army's lines and by-passing numerous towns still held by American forces. These columns—some using captured American Sherman tanks—obviously were trying to seal off big Americans dumps and thus replenish their own supplies.

The main German onslaught was disclosed to have started across the Belgian border in the vicinity of the village of Honsfeld, two miles inside Belgium and 27 miles southeast of Aachen. Nazi armor then split into two fast moving columns, with one veering northeast of Malmedy into the vicinity of Butgenbach and the second stabbing directly west toward Stavelot.

Pincer on Highway Town.

A second Nazi drive was a pincer thrust upon the important highway town of St. Vith, four miles inside Belgium and some 12 miles south of Malmedy. Some American troops were cut off by this drive, but these Yanks still were holding out in scattered pockets and were barring St. Vith to the enemy. Enemy armor had carried within three miles of St. Vith, which is 10 miles southwest of Honsfeld, and one claw of the pincers cut in as far as Maspelt, four miles southeast of St. Vith.

Farther south the Germans drove out of Ardennes forest into Luxemburg on either side of the border town of Echternach, but this push appeared to have gained less ground than those to the north and the enemy at last report had not taken Echternach.

The greatest German penetration in this sector was in the vicinity of Consdorf, five miles southwest of Echternach.

3d Army Takes Pillboxes.

Near the center of the western front Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army captured 40 more pillboxes and fortified houses in the Saarlautern area for a two day total of 176.

A strong Nazi infantry and tank counter-attack knocked back one of Patton's regiments in Rheinheim forest, three and a half miles northeast of Sarreguemines.

The Germans also threw in sharp counter-attacks on the American 7th army front, forcing the Americans to withdraw from Bundenthal, two miles inside Germany northwest of Wissembourg, under heavy shellfire.

The Germans also infiltrated back into Berg after the Americans had passed thru.

CARELESS TALK BY YANKS AIDED NAZIS, IS CHARGE

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 20.—A Stars and Stripes, army newspaper, editorial today suggests that the United States 1st army was caught by surprise in the present German offensive.

"It's a far cry from beer to battlefield," the editorial says, "but chances are good that Von Rundstedt's choice of time and place to launch the Wehrmacht's last vicious thrust was dictated by the scene not unlike one shown here."

Hits Careless Talk.

The editorial is illustrated by posed photographs of a soldier drinking beer and talking to four women in a cage. The editorial is aimed at careless talk. It points out, "The line from Nijmegen [Holland] to Mulhouse [Alsace] is long and in some places thinly held. Agents are busy up and down the border. The loyal can't be told from the lice.

"The Germans, outmatched in men and material, had to play it cagey. To learn where, we were weak. To catch us here—outguess us there. To take us by surprise. To corner clews on yesterday's sortie so that tomorrow's might not turn out so well. To pick up the number of new divisions—to learn the name of a new C. O.

Blame G. I. Joe.

"Von Rundstedt had just one source of information—G. I. Joe. The one eight ball here is the bozo there who gets tight and talkative. Who doesn't know that English isn't an American monopoly—or a secret code. Who forgets that what he says plus what the other guy says adds up to a fateful page in Von Rundstedt's plan of battle."

In other words, the editorial suggests that Von Rundstedt was well informed about our dispositions before he started this offensive—the disclosure of which, if true, is a violation of every form of security.

U. S. BOMBERS BASED IN ITALY HIT NAZIS IN THREE COUNTRIES

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP). — Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers of the American 15th air force, based in Italy, smashed at strategic targets in Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Germany for the sixth straight day today, but bad weather strangled the allied British based fighters and bombers sorely needed to combat German armor in Belgium.

In the bomber raids on German held territory, Liberators struck near Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, using instruments to drop their loads thru heavy clouds. The Fortresses and Liberators also used instruments to bomb the Regensburg area in Germany and Linz, Salzburg and Villach in Austria.

During the six day offensive, the 15th has put approximately 1,000 planes in the air daily, has flown more than 6,000 sorties and hit targets as far away as Upper Silesia and Poland.

A VISIT TO THESE YANKS LIKE DAY ON BOUL MICH

Tribune Man Finds Many Illinoisans in Tank Units.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 6TH ARMORED DIVISION, Lorraine, Dec. 20.—You could shut your eyes, listen to the boys talk, and think you were back along the Boul Mich when visiting some of the units of this outfit.

Practically the first man we saw a couple of days ago during an afternoon with the "Super 6th" was Sgt. Joseph Bruce, a former near north sider who used to tend bar at the St. Clair hotel and also worked for the Bon-Air Country club for four years. His parents live in Wilsonville, Ill.

The divisional chief of staff, Col. Glen C. McBride of Tulsa, Okla., was graduated from the University of Illinois, was with the Illinois state engineering department, and then lived 12 years in Chicago, where he managed the real estate department of the Chicago Title and Trust company. His brother, Maj. O. L. McBride, whose wife, Helen, lives in Villa Park, Ill., is attached to the 7th armored division.

Crammed with Illinoisans.

The 15th tank battalion of the 6th armored division is crammed with Illinoisans. It is commanded by Lt. Col. Embry D. Lagrew of Lexington, Ky. and has run up more than 2,300 miles in combat. It has taken more than three times its strength in prisoners, killed a total of the enemy equivalent to its own strength and taken or destroyed as many guns as the battalion possesses.

The battalion operations officer is Maj. Eugene J. White of Champaign, who left the University of Illinois for the army six years ago. Capt. Stuart Nelson of Rockford and Lt. Karl Yost of Morrison, Ill., and a former Chicago lawyer, also are attached to the 15th. Yost, a Northwestern university graduate, is now battalion communications officer.

Among those we saw were Pvt. Nick J. Chilovich of Mount Olive, now serving in the assault platoon ammunition section, Master Sgt. Paul Woodrum of Tallula, whose job in vehicle maintenance includes retrieving damaged tanks under fire, and Sgt. Lloyd Mechum of Bowen, a tank mechanic.

Springfield Yank Out of Hospital.

Others included Tech. Sgt. Dominic Spalliero of Melrose Park, who now keeps the battalion's electrical equipment in running order, and Sgt. Roy Rhodes of Springfield, now in charge of a 10 ton wrecker which pulls damaged tanks back for repair.

And there is Sgt. William E. Moore of Springfield, a tank mechanic, who is just out of hospital where he was treated for injuries incurred when a tank slid on a muddy road and banged into him. Another is Corp. Karl Lindley of Beardstown, a tank driver.

Pvt. Elmer J. Segers of Creal Springs, also a tank driver, had his vehicle hit by a 75 mm. shell the day before Thanksgiving day and one man was killed and two injured, but he was unhurt. Other drivers include Sgt. William E. Gassaway of Leroy and Sgt. Arthur Koss of Sadorus.

Farm Boy Wounded Twice.

Sgt. Ralph Lawhead, a Robson farm boy who rides a tank recovery vehicle, has been wounded twice, and, according to Capt. Nelson, once helped haul a burning assault gun from the road, despite extremely heavy enemy fire, enabling our column to continue its advance.

There was 2d Lt. Ike B. Lair, whose wife, Mary, lives in Keensburg, Ill. Lair, whose home is in Monticello, Ky., was promoted three days ago from staff sergeant. He won the bronze star three weeks ago for supervising a stream crossing under fire and directing the knocking out of three enemy guns by our tanks.

Other Illinoisans seen at the 15th headquarters were Chicagoans Staff Sgt. John Fray, 4839 N. Keeler av., Sgt. Sydney Backman, 7612 Essex av., a communications man, and Louis Sowa, 4401 S. Wolcott st., an assistant tank gunner. Corp. Gerald Walker, of Thebes, a truck driver, wears the Purple Heart.

All these boys asked that we send Christmas greetings to their folks at home.

YANKS AND NAZIS LOCKED IN BATTLE SOUTH OF BOLOGNA

ROME, Dec. 20 (AP).—American forces south of Bologna are engaged in fighting with German troops in the Tossignan area, while Polish and Indian troops have virtually wiped out all enemy resistance south of Senio river on the eastern end of the Italian battle front, the allied command reported today.

American patrols which slipped into Tossignan reported that heavy barricades had been erected in all streets, and that strong Nazi patrols guarded all roads.

Northeast of Faenza British 8th army forces made limited gains against a 9-mile wide German salient bulging into allied lines between captured Faenza and Bagnacavallo. The Germans had concentrated a large force of troops and much artillery and mortar equipment in the area and were holding on to their positions on the west bank of the Lamone river.

WAR BOND SALES 126.8% OF QUOTA IN CITY, COUNTY

Sharp increase in war bond sales has pushed total sales to 126.8 per cent of the city and county goal, or $1,060,570,000, said Francis M. Knight, drive chairman, yesterday. State sales stood at 127.6 per cent of the quota. War bond officials urged that every one receiving Christmas bonuses invest them in bonds.

Ten Harrison High school pupils presented a Hell Cat tank to the army yesterday in symbolic ceremonies at the treasury center, 74 W. Adams st. The group, headed by Maxine Schednig, 2227 W. 23d pl., reported $57,000 in bonds bought by pupils.

Purchases of $200,000 in bonds was reported made by 200 delegates of the 29 local unions of the district council of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen, and Helpers.

NAZI SLAUGHTER OF PRISONERS STIRS YANK HATE

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Dec. 19 [Delayed].—(AP).—The story of German brutality in slaughtering nearly 150 American prisoners near Malmedy, Belgium, has fired 1st army troops with new hate as they face the Nazi counter-offensive.

It was disclosed on Sunday that doughboys from various units, including medical men wearing Red Cross armbands, were standing in a field just off a road near Malmedy when they were shot down without warning by German pistols and machine guns.

This has been verified by four doughboys who survived and straggled separately back to their own lines. Among then were Pvt. Peter Piscatelli, New York, and Pvt. Roy B. Anderson, Austin, Ind.

"We were just standing there all bunched up," Piscatelli said, "when a German tank man fired a pistol into the crowd. He fired again and then all the Germans opened up. They fired their machine guns and mowed our men down.

"I dropped flat on the ground with my back to them so they wouldn't see me blink. They kept up the firing for about a half hour."

"It Can Happen Here."

Capt. Marvin R. Denzel, West Englewood, N. J., one of the first to hear the story from survivors, said: "We'd heard about such things but kept thinking, 'It can't happen here.' Now we know better."

The official account given out by 1st army headquarters said the slain group of 120 to 150 men was sprayed with machine gun fire from two tanks. The first man to make a break for safety was followed by 20 to 25 others, but only 15 escaped.

Tell of Second Slaughter.

WITH THE UNITED STATES 1ST ARMY, Dec. 19 [Reuters].—According to eyewitness accounts, German tank columns are shooting groups of helpless American prisoners with machine guns, which seems to suggest that to expedite their push they may not be taking prisoners.

One confirmed account stated that German tanks wiped out 150 American artillerymen and medical personnel who surrendered near Monschau on Sunday.

Another account given by a participant said that only a few miles from the scene of the first atrocity a slaying of helpless prisoners took place under equally shocking conditions.

Each time a Nazi officer ordered the prisoners taken to an open field, where they were told to hold their hands above their heads. Tank machine guns then began shooting them.

ORDER TO SPARE HISTORIC PLACES CALLED HUMBUG

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Air Minister Archibald Sinclair told commons today that "frankly it is not practical in attacking German targets" to provide airmen with instructions to avoid bombing cathedrals and other buildings of historic and artistic value.

Miss Eleanor Rathbone, Independent, asked why the system was workable in Italy and not in Germany.

Sinclair responded: "Because we are attacking German war industries and transport on large scale and it would be humbug for me to come to house and say . . ." His last words were lost in a chorus of cheers.

MEN AND TANKS STALK AIR BORNE NAZIS IN FOREST

Careless Hunter Draws Enemy Bullets.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY IN HURTGEN FOREST, Germany, Dec. 20.—In these fog-shrouded woodlands, American troops and tanks today were stalking enemy paratroopers who began dropping a few hours before the start of the Nazi offensive to seize vital communication links and to harass our forces from the rear.

It's a deadly man hunt thru a thick forest country reminiscent of the Indian fighting of early pioneer days. Now, as then, the penalty for a moment's carelessness usually is a bullet fired from behind a bush or a tree trunk.

Many Killed or Captured.

Many of the enemy's air borne soldiers have been killed or captured in the last four days of this guerrilla type warfare. Most of the original force has been separated in small groups.

There are plenty of Germans yet to be found. This is made plain by the numerous check points along the highways. G. I.s and officers, alike, are required to identify themselves regardless of whether they are riding in a jeep or driving a supply truck. One enterprising checker who sought to make doubly sure by asking a few questions of each soldier passing his station said this evening he was amazed at how few knew who won the world series or what football teams are playing in the Rose bowl this year.

"They get tough about it when I ask them," he said in aggrieved tones. "One fellow said he's been too busy fighting and hadn't found out who won the series last year either."

One Group Encircled.

One group of Nazi paratroopers captured yesterday was found to have 23 doughboy prisoners. They were men from a supply battalion located in a rear area who were taken by surprise when the first paratroopers landed.

The hunt was being commanded by Lt. Col. Elisha Peckham of Narragansett, R. I. He said he has the fugitives in one area encircled, but that closing the trap is both difficult and dangerous because of the terrain and heavy underbrush. His men are scattered thru the woods and their only communications are by radio and runners.

The Nazis are gradually being forced in one direction, however, and certainly no longer had a chance of accomplishing their original objectives.

"Those we've taken are top grade soldiers," Peckham said. "They're 18 to 21 and enthusiastic fighters. The part of the offensive they were supposed to help apparently never came off. They expected relief long before this and they're hunting for food and ammunition."

Nazis Escape Trap.

The direction in which they are fleeing is not revealable. They're armed with rifles, machine guns, and mortars. The doughboys, sometimes dimly visible from the road, advance in a slow crouch, breathing frostily. The Yanks usually carry tommy guns which they use without asking too many questions whenever they see a suspicious movement ahead.

Maj. Sam Carter of North Attleboro, Mass., said a large group of fugitives was cornered last night and held in their shallow foxholes under the trees until daybreak when a battle ensued. Altho a number were captured, many refused to surrender and fought back stubbornly. Some managed to slip away altho they're still inside the larger trap.

This is only one segment of the fighting along this sector in the vicinity of Monschau where the Germans are battling fiercely to widen their penetrations of the 1st army line.

Use Infantry-Tank Teams.

It was noted the Nazis used an infantry-tank team which they've been employing at points all along the 60 mile front, contrasted with our separate infantry and tank units. In another attempted breakthru of the northern line, which remained firm all day, the enemy attacked from both the east and south shortly before noon.

During the afternoon American and German artillery engaged in a thunderous duel which became a matter of rather personal interest when a jeep I left parked at a cross roads was found a few moments later with a shrapnel hole slashed into the seat.

Leyte Campaign Nears an End

3 U. S. Divisions 'Destroyed or Badly Mauled,' Nazis Say

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The German radio claimed tonight that "several" allied divisions had been rushed from the Aachen and Saar fronts to check Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's counter-offensive and boasted that "according to incomplete data, three to four American divisions either have been destroyed or badly mauled."

The German daily war bulletin claimed that 10,000 prisoners had been taken in the Nazi counter-offensive.

American tactical reserves thrown in on the right wing of Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army have been engaged and beaten "in very heavy battles" during the last two days, Berlin claimed.

Drive "Ahead of Schedule."

While giving the names of no towns, the Germans said their Ardennes drive was "ahead of schedule and going strong" in its fourth day. They claimed that German losses were "less than anticipated."

The Berlin war bulletin as broadcast said:

"Along the entire attack front in the west our armies yesterday [Tuesday] closed in in depth. A large part of enemy bases left behind the front were cleaned up and attacking spearheads advanced. In this operation fighting ensued at many points with single groups of enemy reserves which had been hurriedly drawn up and immediately brought into action.

"According to reports so far at hand more than 10,000 prisoners have been taken, 200 tanks destroyed or captured, and 124 airplanes shot down.

"London, Liege, and Antwerp were subjected to the fire of our long range weapons."

"Climax Not Reached."

LONDON, Dec. 20 [Reuters].—The military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius of the German transocean news agency, tonight broadcast that allied resistance is increasing on the western front "altho in an obviously uncoördinated fashion and by piecemeal use of reserves." Sertorius claimed that Germans were justified in speaking of the continued favorable progress of the German action, "which has by no means reached its climax yet."

He said that in the last two weeks and months the high command had used only the absolute minimum of troops, "just enough to prevent an allied break thru," and that the continue silence as to the focal point or points of the offensive area was necessary because the "enemy is still completely in the dark on this point and the element of surprise may further favor the Germans."

German troops threw the allies out of Kesternich, six miles northeast of Monschau, for the third time, the German radio said. "On the Eifel [forest] front the Americans launched counter-attacks, but were forced to yield further ground."

AMERICAN TANKS FIGHT 270 NAZIS FOR FARMHOUSE

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE 35TH INFANTRY DIVISION OF THE 3D ARMY, on the German border, Dec. 20.—The 1st battalion of the 320th regiment of this fighting division took a farmhouse near Reicheim yesterday after an attack thru an American made smoke screen, with supporting tanks firing machine guns over the heads of the infantry.

This may not sound like much of an achievement until you know that the farmhouse was well garrisoned and protected by Nazis fighting from a trench system in front of the two story building, whose yard contained 88 mm. mortar emplacements, while other Germans fired from positions in the near-by woods.

The building itself was hardly an ordinary farmhouse, since it was built entirely of stone with walls 14 inches thick, floors 10 inches thick, and the basement ceiling dome shaped like a pillbox. When the Germans build farmhouses near the border they build a place to fight from.

Resistance Is Bitter.

The bitter battle which the Nazis put up for this building, which sits on high ground with a commanding view of the whole countryside, was an indication of the sort of fighting which may be expected across the whole of the 3d reich, barring an unexpected collapse of the wehrmacht.

A resume of the activities of the 320th regiment since Dec. 10 along the Blies river attests to the fierce quality of the German resistance.

On that date, after a 12 hour battle ending at midnight, the infantry men took two hilltop farm houses on the French side of the Blies not far from Bliesbruck, capturing not only a German horse drawn ammunition train but a hundred bolts of fine French cloth and other loot, including a German regimental commander's liquor stock.

Swim River with Rope.

Two days later they took that portion of Bliesbruck lying south of the river after carrying 10 400-pound assault boats a mile and a half by night up to the river bank north of Bliesbruck.

Daylight came before the crossing was attempted, so the boats were hidden behind a railroad cutting. During the afternoon two sergeants waded and swam the river, carrying a rope which they anchored on the far side as a means of getting a foot bridge across that night.

The crossing was made early on the morning of the 13th and by daylight, Germans who had taken positions opposite were surprised to find the Yanks already behind them.

Capture Three Towns.

On the following day the Germans who were still holding the northern portion of Bliesbruck on the far side, made themselves so troublesome firing machine guns from a cemetery there that they were driven out and the whole garrison was killed or captured.

The next day the town of Nieder Gailbach was taken and Reicheim was entered at sundown, along with Fersheim farther north.

By this time, according to Col. Bernard Byrne of Bradentown, Fla., regimental commander, the stone farm house taken yesterday was already behind our lines, but the Germans still were holding out with about 200 men on the hill and another 70 fighting in or around the farmhouse.

Our tanks made the crossing and got so close to the house they could fire point blank into it day before yesterday, but ran out of ammunition and had to be temporarily withdrawn.

Set Farmhouse Afire.

That night the bridge was thrown across and more ammunition was brought over, and yesterday afternoon after our 155s had thoroly worked over the woods and scored eight direct hits on the farmhouse, starting it burning, the tanks again moved up under cover of smoke shells and poured machine gun fire into the upper story of the house.

Then the infantry, which had advanced unseen thru the smoke, made the final assault, driving out or killing those Germans still remaining.

Nazis Use Everything.

According to prisoners, German casualties were heavy, especially in the woods north of the farmhouse, which had every tree blasted.

Col. Byrne says the Germans are fighting with everything they've got even going so far as to bury tin cans in mine fields to make mine detection more difficult.

TIGHTEN GUARD AS NAZIS FLEE ENGLISH CAMP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—A tighter guard was posted tonight over the German prisoner of war camp at Penkridge, Staffordshire, when it was disclosed that 13 officer prisoners in uniform had escaped in Monday night's fog and that hundreds of Nazi officers had attempted to mutiny at the prison today. The flight of seven Germans from a camp at Lodge Moor, Sheffield, was also uncovered.

Some observers ventured the opinion that the German counter-offensive on the western front had given a filip to the spirits of the enemy prisoners which in turn set off the escapes.

Following the flight of the 13 officers, all except one of whom has been recaptured, other Germans held at the Penkridge camp threatened their guards with spades, but retreated when a machine gun squad arrived. German officers booed and taunted their guards, but noncommissioned men refused to join in the disorder.

BELGIAN TOWNS SEE SHIFTING TIDE OF BATTLE

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY IN BELGIUM, Dec. 19 [Delayed].—Today we visited front line towns which had enjoyed liberated status for three months. Their streets were strangely quiet. Little knots of Belgians stood on every street corner.

The Belgians had seen a stream of American vehicles pouring back over these roads for two days, carrying supplies, medical services, headquarters personnel, and their equipment back to safety. The Belgians had expected any hour to hear the rumble of German tanks. Now they cheered pathetically as American jeeps roared in the opposite direction toward the battle.

Police Free Collaborators.

In one town the police, apparently hoping to retain their jobs should the Germans return, had opened the jail, freeing 23 men and women arrested as collaborators. Now, with the Americans going back thru the town and the Germans checked several miles distant, the police faced a quandary.

Over a few hills and down thru forests veteran doughboys after a forced march had plunged into position and checked the Germans, preventing them from driving thru on the northern prong of their great wedge.

One outfit in particular had done yeoman service. Led by their colonel, they had driven miles in the rainy night, all of their trip lit by flares from German planes, which attempted to bomb and strafe their columns but failed to stop them.

Plug Gap in Line.

The outfit plugged what had been a wide open path for the Germans and took over towns which had been hastily evacuated by other Yanks.

These doughboys, who had had little sleep, went into action, supported by tank destroyers. They knocked out 11 tanks yesterday in pitched battles and recaptured two towns. Civilians, who had taken to the cellars during the house to house fighting, seemed pleased to see the Americans reënter their town.

'PEOPLE FOOLED' ABOUT CHARTER, VIEW IN CAPITAL

Roosevelt's Revelation Brings Criticism.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—President Roosevelt's revelation that there is no formal signed and sealed document known as the Atlantic Charter but merely an unsigned memorandum agreed to by him and British Prime Minister Churchill met with a mixed reaction in Washington today.

Typical of the comments were the following expressions by members of the senate foreign relations and house foreign affairs committees:

Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.]: "President Roosevelt wrote the Atlantic Charter into the hearts of the American people and into the hopes of the conquered peoples of this earth, regardless of whether he wrote it down on paper or not. Regardless of the actual paper, it can never be torn from our war aspirations unless we surrender the purposes for which we think we fight."

"People Have Been Fooled."

Rep. Rogers [R., Mass.]: "The American people and the peoples of other united nations have been fooled. They were led to believe there was an Atlantic Charter formally written up and signed by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill. Now it appears there was virtually nothing written and nothing at all signed. This should not, however, change the compelling need for following the lofty principles laid out in the so-called charter.

"It is highly unfortunate that Mr. Churchill felt it necessary at this time to subscribed fully to the grant of eastern Poland to Russia—in direct violation of the charter. We should all concentrate on winning the war at this critical time and not take time out to divide smaller nations. Final settlements should wait until the peace table."

One Document Signed.

Many who commented on the President's disclosure pointed out that there is a formal signed and sealed document embodying the declarations of the Atlantic Charter. This is the joint pledge of the allied nations signed in Washington, Jan. 1, 1942, by the President for the United States, Mr. Churchill for Great Britain, Maxim Litvinoff for Russia, and the envoys of 19 other allies.

The nations bound themselves in this agreement to employ their full resources against the axis, pledged themselves to make no separate peace or armistice, and in the preamble stated they had "subscribed, to a common program of purposes and principles embodied in the joint declaration of the President of the United States of America and the prime minister of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland dated Aug. 14, 1941, known as the Atlantic Charter."

This agreement did not contain the text of the Atlantic Charter but is regarded as binding by reference upon its signatories.

[Text of Atlantic Charter, as issued by the White House in 1941, appears in an adjoining column.]

In defense of their program of expansion in eastern Europe the Russians contend that neither the Atlantic Charter nor the agreement of Jan. 1, 1942, are retroactive and, therefore, do not apply to eastern Poland or any other territories the soviets are now proceeding to annex.

Reds Claim 1939 Division.

According to the Russian thesis, eastern Poland and the Baltic republics were incorporated into Russia by plebiscites following the division of eastern Europe between Hitler and Stalin upon the outbreak of the war in Europe in 1939, two years before the promulgation of the Atlantic Charter. Therefore, the Russians argue, the self-denial of territorial aggrandizement contained in the Atlantic Charter does not apply to the Russian annexation of 1939.

There have been numerous interpretations of the Atlantic Charter regarded by many authorities as whittling down the declaration in important respects. Former Secretary of State Hull said it is not a statute but a statement of aspirations. He said it did not forbid territorial adjustments mutually agreed to. Both he and Mr. Churchill said it did not forbid territorial aggrandizement at the expense of the enemy powers. Mr. Churchill was sure it would not operate to liberate India from British rule.

Atlantic Charter—Back in 1941

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (Special).—The terms of the Anglo-American declaration of aims known as the Atlantic Charter were announced at the White House on Aug. 14, 1941. Official announcement was made by handing out a typewritten copy of a statement issued by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. The two had met shortly before in a secret rendezvous aboard battleships at sea.

Following is the text of the joint declaration upon which the White House statement said Roosevelt and Churchill had agreed:

"Joint declaration of the President of the United States of America and the prime minister, Mr. Churchill, representing his majesty's government in the United Kingdom, being met together, deem it right to make known certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world.

"No Aggrandizement."

"First, their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other.

"Second, they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned.

"Third, they respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live, and they wish to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them.

"Fourth, they will endeavor, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all states, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity.

"Fifth, they desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing for all, improved labor standards, economic advancement, and social security.

"Freedom from Fear,"

"Sixth, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want.

"Seventh, such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance.

"Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea, or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential. They will likewise aid and encourage all other practicable measures which will lighten for peace loving peoples the crushing burden of armaments.

"(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"(Signed) Winston S. Churchill."

ATLANTIC CHARTER'S RADIO OPERATORS NOT AT HAND, BRITAIN SAYS

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Spokesmen for the admiralty and No. 10 Downing st., Prime Minister Churchill's home, said tonight they were unable immediately to identfy or make available for interviews the radio operators President Roosevelt said had transmitted the memoranda of the Atlantic Charter from the battleship Prince of Wales.

The President told a press conference in Washington, D. C., yesterday that the Atlantic Charter never had been drafted into a document, but existed as a series of memoranda which was turned over to radio operators for transmission at the time of his conference at sea with Prime Minister Churchill.

While one naval source said Churchill usually took along his own radio personnel when he went to sea, the admiralty said the operators most likely were naval men. The admiralty insisted, however, that queries as to their identity and whether they survived the subsequent sinking of the Prince of Wales must be submitted in writing. A naval source said that if there is a copy of the charter memoranda it would be in the admiralty archives.

80,000 TONS OF SUPPLIES FLOWN TO WEST FRONT

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES, Paris, Dec. 19 [Delayed].—Troop carrier aircraft, exclusive of air borne military operations, have carried more than 80,000 tons of supplies to the military forces on the continent since D-day. They have also evacuated 82,000 casualties to Great Britain and have carried 90,000 passengers, combined air transport operations, which was organized in the early planning stages for the invasion, announced today.

The R. A. F. group carried 20,000 tons and evacuated 48,000 casualties in the same period.

Increase in Fall.

The need for supply by air became more important during October and November. Supply by air, for example, on Nov. 10 involved 626 sorties, while otherwise they ran around 500 daily.

While gasoline and ammunition comprised a large proportion of the tonnage flown, nearly 5,000 tons of rations, 1,000 tons of medical supplies, 37,000 tons of other combat equipment and 19,000 tons of miscellaneous freight were also handled.

Shows Trend of Battle.

Small arms ammunition, grenades, light machine guns, rockets, bazookas, and flame throwers for bridgeheads; heavy ammunition for reduction of strong points; gasoline and lubricants for rapidly advancing mechanized units; pierced steel planking and matting for advanced air fields; blood plasma and penicillin to hospitals; winter clothing, blankets, overshoes, heat units, kerosene and anti-freeze when cold weather hits suddenly; signal equipment to cover territory taken in rapid advances; boat equipment, water proofing, and outboard motor fuel for river crossing operations; food for civilians of liberated territory; proclamations for regulations of inhabitants of occupied territory; litters and blankets for evacuation casualties, etc.

U. S. PLANES SINK JAP TANKER IN HONGKONG RAID

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 20 (AP).—Air offensive over China's battle fronts overshadowed ground activities tonight as Maj. Gen. Wedemeyer's headquarters announced successful raids on Japanese shipping at Hongkong and blocking of the Burma road by landslides started by United States bombs.

Mustang fighter planes of Maj. Gen. Chennault's 14th air force have swept over Hongkong's water front and sunk one large enemy tanker and probably a Japanese destroyer and two large freighters. They also destroyed two enemy fighters in the air and three on the ground at nearby Kaitak airdrome.

In south-central China, Chinese forces driving southeastward along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railroad continued to attack Japanese positions outside Hochih and made slight gains against determined enemy resistance.

CHICAGO YANKS HELP BUILD BASE IN RECORD SPEED

Stakes Placed First Day on Mindoro.

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MINDORO ISLAND, P. I., Dec. 20.—Army engineers are rapidly turning Mindoro cane fields into a base which could handle several hundred planes.

Brig. Gen. Leif Sverdrup, chief engineer for the Southwest Pacific, said today he had never seen anything like the speed with which strips here are rounded out. Foremen were on the sites by noon of the first day. They included Walter Malinowski, 1347 W. Huron st., Chicago; Eugene Sawicki, 2315 W. Superior st., Chicago, and Dolan Diehl, New Boston, Ill. The engineers moved so fast that a trucker, Les Hogan, Galesburg, Ill., and a tractor operator, Robert Crocket, Sullivan, Ill., carried some of the infantry scouts on their vehicles.

Find Ground is Firm.

By the first evening the surveyors reported to Capt. David Manson, 6614 S. Marshfield av., Chicago, that all stakes were in place. Harvey Mesker, 4048 California av., Chicago, and other electricians rigged floodlights and heavy equipment and went to work. At one end of the strip they had to excavate three feet. That's a lot of dirt.

The sites turned out even better than hoped. The ground was firm, requiring a minimum of packing. Nearby were all sorts of gravel deposits. After the Leyte mud, all this gravel sent the engineers into ecstasies.

Night and day the work was continued, interrupted only by air raids. The men work in three shifts except Lawrence Kletrys, 1430 N. Western av., Chicago. He is the cook, and his housewife's work is never done.

Guns Protect Workers.

The men work in security, surrounded by guns. Henry Workman, 22 W. 74th st., Chicago, is an engineer assigned to a machine gun. The engineer fighters are abetted by infantrymen like Edward Puchta, 4311 Haddon av., Chicago.

Gen. Sverdrup was lavish in his praise of Lt. Col. William Ellison, Nashville, Tenn., the Mindoro task force engineer. The general confided he had a personal interest in rapid construction. He said he made a bet with Lt. Gen. Kenny of the air forces that the air strips would be ready on time. The bet, he said, is cinched.

CHICAGO SOLDIER VISITS PARENTS ON ITALY FARM

A Chicago soldier who had not seen his mother and father since he was a boy recently was given opportunity to visit them when his regiment paused near their farm in Italy. His parents, former Chicago residents, had returned to that country 15 years ago, a 5th army news release reported yesterday.

The soldier is Pvt. Louis Benetti, 2320 W. 24th st. He was born in Chicago and has a brother, Aldo, in the navy. As a member of the 135th regiment, 34th [Red Bull] division of the 5th army, Benetti, who formerly worked for the International Harvester company here, spent six days with his parents when the sector in which they live was cleared of Germans.

ILLINOIS YANKS ARE FARMERS ON GUADALCANAL

BY WALTER SIMMONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GUADALCANAL, Dec. 12 [By air mail].—Two years ago the most constructive project on this island was the liquidation of Japs. Today it's the growing of vegetables, with special emphasis on corn on the cob for Christmas dinner.

"Farmers" such as Sgt. Oscar B. Piotrowski, 6828 S. Wood st., Chicago, have been tilling more than 2,000 acres of land which produce up to 860 tons of vegetables monthly. About 75 army units add to the volume by farming two or three acre plots.

Can't Grow Potatoes.

Other temporary agrarians include these Illinois men: Corporals Howard Hornbeck, Fairbury, and Kenneth Kaufman, Argenta; T/5 Robert Johnson, Capron, and Pvt. Ivan Stueber, Highland. Lt. John R. King, Bloomington, Ind., is one of the officers in charge. Other Indianans are T/5 James Tressler, Wabash, and Pvt. Wayne Hamon, Rushville.

Eighteen months' experience has shown that potatoes and root crops such as beets, carrots, and parsnips, can't be grown. Excessive midday heat cracks the roots. Peas and lima beans are off the list because Guadalcanal has no bees to fertilize the blossoms. [Two hives of bees were flown from Australia, but birds and ants ate them.] Cauliflower and broccoli are likewise out.

All the Worms There.

That leaves such favorites as corn, tomatoes, lettuce, radishes, peppers, cabbage, eggplant, okra, watermelon, and cantaloupe. With the tropical year around growing season three crops of corn can be grown, and five of radishes. Corn must be tended carefully to avoid suckering.

Experiments have been made by dropping vegetable parapacks to isolated units on nearby islands. Men were surprised to open the boxes and find watermelons.

Insects and plant diseases include all the familiar kinds—blight, wilt, aphids, squash bugs, corn earworms, and cabbage worms. There is, however, no corn smut, and corn borers are missing.

Based on Guadalcanal experience, similar farms have been started on Guam, Saipan, and many other Pacific islands.

CARRIED FROM BLAZING HOUSE.

Mrs. Dora Taloff, 55, was carried to safety from her flaming apartment, 2748 12th-pl., yesterday by Bruce Poland of Engine company 44. Damage was estimated at $600.

BRITISH TROOPS PUSH AHEAD IN TWO MORE ATTACKS IN BURMA

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 20 (AP).—British troops opening up two new drives in Burma have slashed 15 and 18 miles, respectively, thru Japanese defenses under strong allied air support, dispatches disclosed today.

One column advanced 18 miles to the vicinity of Pyingaing against negligible enemy resistance. This force is striking east from the Kaleymo area south of Tiddim in the Chin hills. The second force drove south toward the roadhub town of Shwebo, 140 miles northwest of Mandalay.

Britain Yields Big Areas of Ethiopia to Selassie

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Britain has turned back to the jurisdiction of Haile Selassie large areas of Ethiopia previously administered by British military authorities, Foreign Secretary Eden said today in outlining a new British-Ethiopian agreement. "Sovereignty of the emperor remains untouched by the agreement," he told commons.

BRITAIN WON'T FORCE KING ON GREEKS: EDEN

Answers Critics of Steps Taken in Athens.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Foreign Secretary Eden assured the house of commons today that Britain was not trying to "impose a king with British bayonets on the Greek people" as he defended the Churchill government's steps in Greece.

Neither is Britain opposed to a regency, Eden said, but refused to be pinned down on whether the government favored such a move. "It was, in fact, the British ambassador in Athens who first suggested a regency," he told the house.

Eden explained that the British aim is to maintain law and order in Greece and to establish a Greek government broadly representative of all opinion, including that of the leftist EAM, whose ELAS militia units now are battling the British in Athens. The first task, he said, would be to provide food and relief, and the second, to organize free elections.

Urges Allied Conferences.

The foreign secretary pleaded for quarterly conferences "between the foreign secretaries of the great powers as we used to have to deal with some of these matters."

The sharpest attack on Britain's armed intervention in Greece was made by Laborite Aneurin Bevan who declared that altho the British had landed as liberators they might be remaining as tyrants. Bevan warned that if and when the house returns after the Christmas recess, British troops still are being used "for the subjugation of the Greek people," he and other Laborites will call for a vote of censure even if the party leaders do not take the initiative. This would force a vote of confidence and compel the government to resign if defeated.

Bevan asserted that by taking sides in the political quarrel the British nation had been brought to "humiliation and shame" and added that the Greeks do not trust the British government because it has been intriguing for two years to get King George II. back on the throne.

Objects to Indian Troops.

Bevan also objected to the use of Ghurkas [Indian troops] against the Greeks on the ground that "they are politically backward people and can be relied upon to fire upon the Greeks." This statement brought shouts and protests.

Laborite Spokesman Arthur Greenwood blamed Churchill for mishandling the situation in Greece and embittering the political situation at home. Greenwood declared it was a political and not a military problem and demanded an armistice.

Percy Harris, a Liberal, asserted the feeling in Britain on the Greek question was not a litigation engineered by the leftist elements.

"There is deep resentment among the common people in Britain, who feel their sons are being used to shoot down our allies," he said. "There is a suspicion, too, that the government is playing the game of power politics and endeavoring to establish a sphere of influence. The real danger is that all the allies are maneuvering for position. We are sowing the seeds of war."

U. S., Russia Approved Action.

Replying, Eden insisted that before the British acted in Greece they consulted the United States and Russia, both of which approved. He assured commons the government was trying to wind up the conflict as quickly as possible, and declared Britain wanted neither strategic nor economic advantage in Greece altho stating "of course it is true we have interests in the Mediterranean."

The house of lords is scheduled to debate the Greek situation tomorrow with the introduction of a censure motion regretting the government's policy "which has the shameful result of a military action against our Greek allies."

1,000 Greek Rebels Seize British Plane Headquarters

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 20.—An eyewitness today described the vicious 24 hour battle which preceded capture of the R. A. F. headquarters 10 miles northeast of Athens by 1,000 Greek leftist ELAS forces yesterday.

"The ELAS struck at 2 a. m. Monday supported by mortars and machine gun fire," the witness said. "They soon gained positions inside our defense perimeter and closed in and surrounded our main buildings, Hotels Cecil and Pentelikon.

"Despite the fact that we had only light automatic weapons and mortars, we held out all Monday and until late Monday night. Then came the final ELAS assault against the hotels. The guerrillas dynamited the ends of the buildings and then rushed us—men, women, and even young boys armed with automatic weapons and grenades. By this time our garrison had almost no ammunition left. The dynamiting fired the buildings."

Appeal for Relief.

The witness disclosed that the besieged garrison sent a last radio appeal to British headquarters before midnight Monday. An armored relief column was dispatched at dawn Tuesday, and arrived after the main body of the ELAS scattered after capture of the hotels. Some British prisoners of the ELAS in the vicinity when the tanks arrived, escaped and made their way to the column. It is believed the troops also searched the buildings, bringing out the British wounded, before the column retired, leaving the headquarters in ELAS hands.

Another ELAS victory was the capture of the famous Averoff prison, which held more than 600 prisoners, mostly Quislings and collaborationists. A British officer said it was probable many of the 105 women prisoners left behind burned to death in their cells.

Joannis Rhallys, the pro-Nazi premier who escaped from the prison, was arrested tonight. He was seized by Greek civil police in the home of friends in the fashionable Kolonaki district, and seemed none the worse for his adventures.

Willing to Surrender.

He had sent word that he was willing to surrender after being at large and the object of widespread search for 48 hours.

The Communist newspaper Rizospastis claimed two other prisoners who fled Averoff during the siege had been captured and put to death. It was reported they were Gen. George Bacos, former minister of national defense, and George Pirounakis, minister of supplies during the German occupation.

ELAS forces also have reoccupied Ardettus hill near central Athens. The British took the hill Monday but withrew that night because the hill was under fire from commanding ELAS positions in a cemetery on a higher hill near-by.

The British have scored two successes in the last two days. In heavy fighting they managed to clear most of the ELAS snipers from the main highway connecting Athens and the port city of Piraeus, which is their supply base, so that their forces in central Athens no longer are cut off and surrounded. It is along this highway that new troops can pour in to aid in the task of driving the ELAS from the three-fifths of Athens and Piraeus the guerrillas still hold.

Secondly, they have consolidated their positions on Monument hill near the Acropolis. The hill was captured by the British before dawn two days ago.

Issues Ultimatum

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 20 (AP).—Lt. Gen. Scobie, British commander in Greece announced tonight that as of 9 a. m. tomorrow any ELAS batteries still firing in Athens and Pireaus will be attacked "with all the arms at my disposal," and warned civilians to put 500 yards between themselves and leftist gun positions.

In leaflets captioned "urgent warning" and dropped from R. A. F. planes, the British commander announced that he intends to use machine guns, rocket weapons, bombs, land artillery, mortars, and naval bombardment on an all-out scale in an effort to silence insurgent guns which have been active for 10 days.

Meanwhile, the people of Greece awaited announcement of a reply from King George II. in London to learn whether he will accept a recommendation that the nation's leadership be turned over to the regency of Archbishop Damaskinos.

FRENCH CLAIM PACT WITH REDS TO SLICE REICH

Agree on Foe's East, West Borders.

PARIS, Dec. 20 (AP).—The French consultative assembly today prepared to open debate on the French-soviet alliance amid authoritative reports that the Moscow conferees had agreed on mutual support in projected amputations of German territory on both the east and west in eventual peace settlements.

[Foreign Secretary Eden yesterday said the British government welcomed the French-Russian treaty.]

Assembly members who heard Foreign Minister Georges Bidault's report on the treaty in a closed session of the foreign affairs committee yesterday said France consented to retracing of the soviet-Polish frontier along the Curzon line and giving to Poland German territories east of the Oder in compensation for territory she would lose to Russia on the east.

Seek Independent State.

Russia, in turn, they said, promised to support French claims to the Rhineland and Ruhr industrial basin in western Germany. This territory, according to the most prevalent French view, should be cut off from the reich and set up as an independent state under French and Belgian suzerainty.

Meanwhile, the foreign affairs committee turned down a motion by Louis Saillant, president of the National Resistance council, providing that France propose a similar alliance with Britain and the United States. The committee said the moment was not opportune.

Tells Red Aims.

Bidault said, according to the assembly members, that the Russians wanted the French to subscribe to a tri-partite treaty with Britain and the soviet union, but that Gen. de Gaulle had insisted on a separate pact. Bidault was quoted as saying De Gaulle promised to negotiate a French-British accord as soon as possible after his return to Paris.

The French delegation, citing France's historical interests in the Balkans, raised the question of a Greek settlement. Premier Stalin, however, replied that this was of more interest to Britain, and that Moscow was overseeing events in Bulgaria and Romania, it was reported.

De Gaulle was expected to make a statement to the assembly regarding the treaty tomorrow. It was believed certain the alliance will receive assembly approval.

NAZI PROPAGANDISTS FISH IN TROUBLED ALLIED WATERS: REDS

MOSCOW, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Russian army newspaper Red Star said today that German agents were attempting, "thru reactionary circles in the United States and other countries," to block the formation of an international peace organization and were preparing for a third world war.

The article also said the Germans were seeking to stir up controversies among the allies over the question of Germany's future.

"In the past few days the Hitlerites have pointed with unconcealed pleasure to the activity of the isolationist elements in the United States who already have started agitation against participation by the United States in a world organization of international security," the article said.

AIRFORCE HDQRS. FOR U. S. IS MADE SEPARATE UNIT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Establishment of a continental air forces headquarters to relieve army air force headquarters in Washington of some command functions was announced today by the war department.

The new unit will be located at the Camp Springs, Md., army air field, southeast of Washington. It will be responsible for air defense of the United States, for joint air-ground training, and for the organization, reorganization, and training of service and combat personnel.

The creation of the C. A. F. headquarters will transfer the operating features of army air force headquarters into the field, leaving higher level A. A. F. policies and planning in the Washington headquarters.

KING OF GREECE HOUSE-HUNTING; SEES LONG EXILE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Indication that King George of Greece is anticipating a long exile in England was seen tonight in the report he is busy house hunting and is prepared to pay $40,000 or more for a suitable country mansion. The housing shortage is acute even in stately homes, but after a two month search the king is said to be closing a deal for a sizable estate.

In the meantime, he occupies a suite in a London hotel, where he keeps in close touch with the news and parliamentary debates as well as the rationing situation. He sends a bellhop to market with the royal ration book whenever oranges are on sale.

Apart from his personal fortune, the last budget published by the Greek government last February showed the king receives $212,840 annually. He has to pay allowances to the crown prince and members of the royal family as well as court expenses from this, but more than half the total goes to the king.

Failure to Detect German Plans Unexplained.

Asked why the British army is not doing any fighting, the war department said it is contrary to policy to give any information concerning the forces of an allied nation.

The German forces in their counter-attack caught the Americans "flat footed" in a movement of complete surprise and overran the American line in several places between Monschau and Trier, penetrated the forests and mountains of the Eifel and the Ardennes, and threatened the allied flank poised on the Roer and Meuse rivers to the north.

Beat Us to the Draw.

At the time of the attack the American 3d army was on the borders of the Saar, the 7th was in Germany pushing up the Rhine valley, and all was in readiness for the next stage of the winter campaign involving the crossing of the Roer and the Meuse and a drive into the Cologne plain. But the Germans beat us to the draw and upset our plans.

There is much speculation on the mysteries of the situation, particularly where the large forces employed by the Germans came from and how it was possible to assemble them without the knewledge of Gen. Eisenhower and his associated commanders with all their intelligence facilities including an air coverage far surpassing that of the enemy.

As to the source of the large numbers of troops assembled by the Germans for this drive attention is directed to the eastern front and particularly the Polish sector which has been quiet for several months because of Stalin's unwillingness to attack Germany at this point until the Poles surrender to the soviet demands for Polish territory and a pro-soviet Polish government. There have been reports for several weeks that the Germans were withdrawing divisions from the Polish sector for use on the western front.

Stalin-Hitler Deal Hinted.

These reports gave rise to the belief in some quarters that Stalin and Hitler had made a deal reminiscent of their nonaggression pact which touched off the war in Europe in 1939. The general view in Washington, however, a view founded largely on information contained in British Prime Minister Churchill's parliament speech last Friday and on inferences from Secretary of State Stettinius' statement on Poland Monday, is that no deal was necessary to create the situation enabling the Germans to withdraw a large number of divisions from the eastern front to throw against the Americans in the west.

Stalin, according to this view, is not so much interested in helping the British and Americans to press the war to a speedy conclusion as he is in consolidating the power and interests of the soviet union in eastern Europe. In pursuance of this object he halted operations in the Polish sector and devoted his activities to mopping up the Baltic states and the Balkan countries in which he set up communist governments in the wake of his conquering armies and executed or deported all citizens who resisted the confiscation of their properties and application of other communist principles.

Stalin Stops at Warsaw.

Stalin's military operations ever since driving the Germans from Russian soil have reflected the determination to force Poland to accept his program of domination and to compel Great Britain and the United States to further his plans. To this end he pushed his offensive against the Germans right up to the gates of Warsaw and there he stopped. He was accused of withholding aid from Gen. Bor and his underground Polish forces in Warsaw as a result of which they were annihilated by the Germans who are still in possession of the Polish capital.

Stalin made it abundantly clear he would not move against Germany in the Polish sector, which is the shortest route to Berlin, until Poland accepted his territorial demands and a pro-soviet government. His strategy was directed not only at the exiled Polish government in London but at Great Britain and the United States.

As the Russian inactivity in the Polish sector continued month after month to the benefit of the Germans, who were enabled thereby to mass greater forces on the western front, the British became increasingly concerned and Churchill finally capitulated in his speech last week, indorsing Stalin's demands on Poland and threatening to withdraw recognition from the Polish government in London. He made no bones of wanting the Poles to yield to Stalin in order to induce Stalin to attack Germany in the Polish sector.

Mr. Roosevelt came to the support of Churchill Monday in the Stettinius statement that the United States would not object to Polish territorial readjustments.

THE QUESTION.

Do you consider a formal education or practical experience more essential to success?

WHERE ASKED.

THE ANSWERS.

Charles F. Seeman, sales engineer, 2303 Gunderson av., Berwyn—It depends upon the field in which they wish to succeed. In certain lines education is certainly the first requirement—any technical profession. Experience, of course, must come later. In some trades they ask employes to attend school at night.

J. Corby Klicka, deputy clerk, 2359 S. Ridgeway av.—Practical experience. If you speak from experience you know what you are talking about. Experience is much more understandable, thoro, and real. Theory is nothing without putting it to practice. Of course a college degree has never been a disadvantage to any one.

Howard Doyle, United States attorney, Springfield—Experience, because it necessarily carries with it knowledge perhaps of a degree more useful than theoretical knowledge gained from the study of books. In other words, you will find the knowledge acquired thru experience reduced to cold print in the books.

Harry A. Ash, attorney, 222 E. Chestnut st.—I consider a formal education a vital and necessary ingredient to success. I just received a letter from my brothers-in-law in the army expressing their wish to complete their education after the war. They found experience isn't sufficient without education.

Raymond L. Keegan, real estate, 8119 Oglesby av.—Men with practical experience and men with formal education have been successful. I believe it is entirely within the individual's efforts. The great advantage of a formal education is being able to write it on an application or being able to say you are a college graduate.

Virginia Renesch, receptionist, 6540 Kenwood av.—Education is the systematic training of intellectual faculties while experience is the knowledge gained by trial and practice. Tho many have been successful without a formal education, I believe there's plenty of time for experience and time spent on education is well worth while.

Death of Yank's Wife in Room Called Accident

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the inquest into the death of Mrs. Raymond Markham, 25, a soldier's wife who disappeared from her home at 6150 Greenwood av. and was found dead nine days later in a rooming house at 619 Belden av. Corp. Raymond Markham, who came home on an emergency furlough to search for his wife, testified that he knew of no reason why she would have taken her own life. The coroner's report declared she died of an overdose of sleeping powder.

CRASHES KILL TWO ENSIGNS FROM ILLINOIS

Boston, Mass., Dec. 20 (AP).—Names of three navy flyers missing after the disappearance of their planes on operational flights over Narragansett bay were announced by the navy today. They included Ensign Herman A. Rodgers, 23, of 218 W. Second South st., Carlinville, Ill., and Ensign Robert I. Lane, 23, of 1540 E. 62d st., Chicago.

Ensign Lane.

Rodgers was a pilot of a fighter plane reported missing off Point Judith, R. I., on Dec. 15, while Lane was pilot of a ship which disappeared Dec. 18.

PLANNED HOLIDAY VISIT.

Lane, who lived with his grandmother, Mrs. Helen Lane, at the 62d st. address, was graduated from Englewood High school in 1939 and worked at Western Electric before enlisting in the navy in December, 1942. He received his wings a year ago, and recently wrote that he would spend the holidays in Chicago, his grandmother reported.

Chicagoan Among Eight Dead.

Waco, Tex., Dec. 20 (AP).—The Waco army air field released today names of eight airmen killed and one injured in the crash of two twin engined training planes near Elkhart, Tex. The dead included 2d Lt. John Neumyer Jr., 20, Muskegon, Mich.; Flight Officer Rollin C. Wellman, 23, Detroit, Mich.; Aviation Cadet Morris E. Rivers, 22, Russellville, Ind., and Aviation Cadet Edmund L. Roth, 19, Chicago.

13 TOWNS FALL TO RUSSIANS IN SLOVAKIA DRIVE

LONDON, Dec. 21 [Thursday]—(AP).—The Red army, in advances up to five miles in southern Czechoslovakia yesterday, captured 13 towns and cracked and outflanked the Germans' strong Siana river line in a drive aimed toward the citadel of Losonc. The Moscow bulletin last night and a supplemental elaboration this morning said nothing of the encircling thrust against Kassa, where unofficial reports had soviet forces preparing for a climactic attack on the Torysa [Tarca] river fortifications two miles outside that communications center.

Moscow announced that about 500 Germans were killed in the day's fighting on the front 45 to 60 miles southwest of Kassa.

Budapest remained under close siege, and there were hints that the Russians were preparing to cut the German escape route northwest from the Hungarian capital.

REPORT F. D. R. WILL UNFREEZE FRENCH BILLIONS

New York, Dec. 20 [Special].—President Roosevelt was reported today to have ordered the treasury department to prepare to "unfreeze" the French gold hoard and other wealth placed under lock and key more than four years ago.

Valued at more than two billion dollars, the holdings soon will be deeded by Presidential order to the French government of Gen. De Gaulle, it is reported.

CONGRESS MAY PROBE PILFERING OF U.S. SUPPLIES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Reports that thefts of gasoline and food from supply lines have been a serious problem for American armies in Europe brought talk today of a congressional investigation.

Both senate and house committees evinced interest in press dispatches saying that pilfering of supplies reached such proportions at one time as to menace military operations.

Dispatches have told of instances of American soldiers selling supplies and of gangsters "hijacking" them for resale on the black market.

Probe Hinges on Report.

Acting Chairman Thomason [D., Tex.] of the house military committee said the question of an inquiry probably would hinge on the report brought back by a subcommittee that has been inspecting battlefront conditions.

Members of the group returned here tonight by air and Acting Chairman Costello [D., Cal.] said they found "things in excellent condition." He said there appeared to be no critical supply shortages. Members generally declined comment pending a conference tomorrow with war department officials.

Chairman Mead [D., N. Y.] disclosed that two members of the senate war investigating committee are going to North Africa after Christmas and intend to discuss the pilfering problem with army authorities there. Senators Burton [R., O.] and Tunnell [D., Del.] will make the trip.

Cigarets Go Astray.

At recent hearings by Mead's committee, Col. Fred C. Foy, director of purchases for the army service forces, acknowledged that shortly after the landings in Europe as high as 30 per cent of some cigaret shipments into that area had gone astray.

A delayed Paris dispatch, dated Dec. 4, by Wade Werner, Associated Press correspondent, said gasoline had been "hijacked" at the point of a gun in Paris streets and that thefts of supplies at one time "reached a point where black market operators got almost a bigger share of some trainloads than did the front line troops."

Such losses have been cut down to "manageable proportions," Werner added, by new military police battalions.

In October, the army newspaper Stars and Stripes, quoted a supply officer at the Normandy base section as saying pipelines and truck convoys bound for the front were being looted of thousands of gallons of gasoline and tons of rations.

BRITISH OFFICER FIRED OVER PACT TO HAVE CHILD

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Lt. Herbert Leak, 29, has been dismissed from the British army as a result of his arrangement with an auxiliary territorial service woman to become the mother of his child, it was announced today. The charge was "improper association."

The dismissal was ordered by a court martial which last month heard Leak testify that his wife, who was unable to have a child, suggested that he enter relations with Pvt. Betty MacFarlane, a telephone operator in his anti-aircraft battery.

Leak said that Pvt. MacFarlane, whose husband is serving overseas, had volunteered to bear a child for him and that they had relations only once. Mrs. Leak said she had been looking after the ATS woman, who was dismissed because of pregnancy.

PARK DISTRICT OPENS 17 MORE SKATING RINKS

Seventeen new ice skating rinks were opened by the park district yesterday and the total rose to 50, Edward J. Welch, park landscape engineer, announced. Skating was permitted yesterday on lagoons in McKinley, Sherman, Washington, Douglas, Garfield, Humboldt, and Lincoln parks. Rinks were opened in Union park on the west side, at Cornel square and Fuller park on the south side, and in the following locations on the north and northwest sides: Athletic field, 3546 Addison st., and Kilbourn, La Follette, Norwood, Olympia, Shabbona, and Hamlin parks.

OPA LAWYER OUT; ELSON SAYS HE RESIGNED POST

Russian born Alex Elson, regional enforcement attorney, severed his connections with the regional office of price administration yesterday, but whether or not he resigned at the request of Chester Bowles, OPA administrator, was not disclosed officially.

Alex Elson.

Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, remained silent, but other officials said that Elson was the fourth person in Walter's office to be fired within the last three months for alleged insubordination. The others, they said, were Wilfred Carsel, Harry Maurer, and Byron Sharpe.

Elson, who left Washington Monday after attending a regional conference, said last night that he first attempted to resign several months ago, but that Bowles asked him to remain. "I told them in Washington Monday that I was going to resign upon my return to Chicago," he said, "and I did."

Zenith and Farnsworth Get Television Permits

Permits for the construction of experimental television stations were issued yesterday by the federal communications commission in Washington, D. C., to the Zenith Radio corporation of Chicago and the Farnsworth Television and Radio corporation of Fort Wayne, Ind. In both cases the frequency will be assigned later, the FCC announced.

SHIP SHORTAGE CURTAILS ALLIED RELIEF PROGRAM

New York, Dec. 20 [Special].—The Foreign Policy association, in a bulletin released today, disclosed that altho the allied nations shipping pool has 3,700 vessels, it is insufficient to carry needed military supplies across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, with the result that only occasionally can ships be spared to handle relief goods.

"Many ships bound for Leyte leave from east coast ports because the Pacific coast lacks port facilities to handle all the vessels needed for supplying Gen. MacArthur's army," the bulletin said, adding that round trips across the Pacific average 100 to 150 days.

From the beginning, American policy has put war shipping ahead of relief shipping, but the Foreign Policy association raises the question whether the arrival of winter will force reconsideration, with more ships assigned to relief.

FOUR FUR COATS STOLEN.

Harry Turner, a salesman, of 1436 Lunt av., reported to police that while his car was parked in front of 846 Roosevelt rd. yesterday, thieves took out of it four women's fur coats valued at $2,088.

CANADA BACKS FREE EXCHANGE OF WORLD NEWS

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 20 (AP).—Approval by the Canadian parliament of inclusion of a freedom-of-news clause in world peace treaties appeared certain today on the basis of statements to the Canadian press by the leaders of the four major parties in the house of commons.

[In London Christopher Chancellor, general manager of Reuters, pledged the support of his organization for an "honesty in news between nations" program and praised the freedom in international news plan of Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press.]

WHOLESALE FIRM SUSPENDED.

Karasik brothers, wholesale grocers at 87 Market st., were suspended from business for six months yesterday, with a stay in favor of probation after 60 days, on charges before OPA Commissioner John R. Allen that the firm extended ration credit on retail deliveries of 35,000 pounds of sugar.

PLAN TO SPAN WORLD IN 60 HOURS BY AIR

Chicago Has Big Role in Post-War Scheme.

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

Post-war air transportation plans provide that no habitable spot on earth will be more than 60 hours away from any other habitable spot. This is not a dream. Many world aerial lanes were in use before the war, others are being used under war time pressure, and still more are being charted for use after the war.

Responsible airmen long have predicted for Chicago a growing and definite role in this aerial remaking of the world. A principal world route developed but due for great expansion lies along the northern North Atlantic—the short cut to Europe. Destiny, with proper acceleration from the farsighted, may make Chicago not merely one of the route's terminals, but its terminus.

Air Fields Dot Course.

Numerous military and civil air fields dot strategic land and coastal areas between Chicago and important European ports. They will be found in the United States, Canada, Labrador, Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Greenland, and Iceland. American and British funds have gone into most of these fields. Most are used jointly by the army air transport command and the royal Canadian air force, and operated by one or the other.

A much discussed route, practical today under the present arrangement of air fields, is from Chicago to London by way of Goose Bay, Labrador, BW-1, in Greenland; and Meeks field, Iceland. The distance is roughly 4,500 miles. The journey can be made swiftly and by easy stages. ATC four-engine planes cruise now at 225 miles an hour. Commercial air lines contemplate cruising speeds of 250.

A thumbnail sketch of available military and civil fields, which no doubt will figure in post-war aviation, presents an understandable picture of future flying across the Chicago-Labrador-Greenland-Iceland route. Here are the principal fields, so far as security restrictions permit descriptions:

CHICAGO—The great Chicago airport, one of the busiest in the world, on the southwest side of the city, which is to be further expanded. It now can handle "anything in the air."

GRENIER FIELD, N. H.—An air transport command base, and headquarters of the North Atlantic division of the ATC. It is large enough to accommodate all military aircraft.

PRESQUE ISLE, ME.—An air transport command base in the northeastern section of Maine, principal debarkation and embarkation point for trans-Atlantic flights. Its runways are numerous and long, serving all aircraft purposes.

MONTREAL, QUE.—A landing field large enough to handle virtually all types of planes.

MINGAN FIELD, QUE.—An air transport command base operated on lease. It is on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, near the village of Longue Point de Mingan. Roomy enough to accommodate cargo and other type of planes.

HARMON FIELD, NEWFOUNDLAND.—An air transport command base, near St. George's bay and the village of Stephenville, on the western side of Newfoundland. It is leased from the crown colony of Newfoundland, and is an important stop on the trans-Atlantic route.

GANDER FIELD, NEWFOUNDLAND.—An air transport command base, 20 miles from the village of Gambo, on Gander lake. It is owned by the royal Canadian air force, and operated jointly by the R. C. A. F. and the ATC. Visibility and climate are superior to most northern bases. The field is closed less than 2 per cent of the time.

BOTWOOD, NEWFOUNDLAND—This base was established years ago by Pan-American, and is a port of entry for its huge Clippers. It is primarily a base for seaplanes, and a commercial takeoff point over the Atlantic, with its first main stop at Foynes, southwestern Ireland. On a dogleg bend, it is 1,972 miles from Chicago.

SHEDIAC, NEW BRUNSWICK—Some 471 miles below Botwood, and that much closer to Chicago, Shediac also is a main port of Pan-American. Like Botwood, it is used commercially mainly in seasonal months, meaning not in winter.

GOOSE BAY, LABRADOR—Here is definitely a key field in the future North Atlantic setup. Owned by Canada, but operated jointly by the R. C. A. F. and the ATC, it stands on a plateau between the Goose and Hamilton rivers, at the southwest end of Hamilton gap. Altho 200 miles inland, it has excellent deep water connections with the ocean. Fogs and high winds are not common, but winter snows are severe. Nevertheless, Goose Bay operates the year 'round.

CRYSTAL 1, QUEBEC—Crystal 1 is an air transport command base seven miles southwest of Fort Chimo Trading post, in Quebec, Canada. With temperatures sometimes down to 46 below, it rates as one of the coldest of the ATC bases. It has suitable field accommodations.

BW-8, GREENLAND—Also an air transport command base, nicknamed Bluie 8. It is situated at the base of a 1,500 foot mountain, deep in a fiord, some 700 miles north of the southern tip of Greenland, on the western coast. Temperatures range from 31 below zero to 70 above.

BW-1, GREENLAND—Called Bluie 1, this is another air transport field and sits somewhat slopingly on the edge of Tunugdliarfik fiord, on Greenland's southern tip, 50 miles from the town of Julianehaab. High winds, a yearly temperature average of 36, long summer days, and long winter nights are its characteristics. Its winter weather is milder than Chicago's. It is accessible only by air.

BE-2, GREENLAND—This air transport base nestles tightly on the east coast of Greenland, 500 miles north of the tip, northeast of Angmagsalik on Ikateg fiord. Temperatures range from 16 below zero to 65 above, and winds reach hurricane force.

MEEKS FIELD, ICELAND—One of the largest and finest air transport bases of the North Atlantic wing, across the bay from Reykjavik. It is an important trans-Atlantic stop, designed primarily for transient service. Fogs are relatively infrequent, winter temperatures are milder than Chicago's, but winter winds often reach gale velocity.

The proposed Chicago-Labrador-London route would follow generally the great circle, on a line still farther north than that followed presently by commercial air lines. Pan-American has made tentative plans linking Chicago with its trans-Atlantic service. The immediate tie-up would be via Montreal, about 700 miles away. The first stages of the link necessarily would be by land plane.

Parenthetically, it might be mentioned that many ATC pilots, with commercial air lines backgrounds, prefer land planes over seaplanes while flying the ocean because their lighter weight and readily retractable gear permit greater speeds.

Ready for Emergencies.

Chicago to the United Kingdom, via Goose Bay in Labrador, can be easily visualized on the map showing most of the above mentioned fields. Not all would be utilized, but they are there for emergency and other purposes.

Goose Bay is 1,615 miles on a direct line from Chicago. An intermediate stop at Montreal, requiring a slight directional and distance veer, would add little time or mileage to the route.

The next hop would be across Davis strait from Goose Bay to BW-1, the ATC base in southern Greenland. The distance is roughly 800 miles. From BW-1 to Meeks field, Iceland, is 915 miles. This, however, would not be on the most direct line, the contemplated lap cutting diagonally across the Greenland ice cap to a point near BE-2, on the east coast, thus shortening the water hop over Denmark strait. From Iceland to London is 1,200 miles.

Made in Easy Stages.

The total Chicago-London distance involved is about 4,500 miles, approximately that of current commercial routes. It is marked by easy stages. Air fields are seldom less than two or three flight hours away. There are no unusually long water hops, the longest being about 800 miles between Goose Bay and BW-1.

One objection may be offered. Altho field facilities at BW-1 in Greenland are good, the field is difficult to reach. It is on a fiord, surrounded by mountains. However, modern ships need not stop there. They can skirt southern Greenland, and fly direct from Goose Bay to Iceland, a distance of 1,530 miles over open water. Today hundreds of aircraft skirt southern Greenland on overwater hops to Goose Bay, or to Harmon field, in Newfoundland, and their crews have the satisfaction of knowing that in case of trouble BW-1 is just ahead or behind.

Before the war the accepted North Atlantic route, largely conceived by Pan-American, lay between Botwood or Shediac and Foynes, Ireland. This still is the traditional commercial route. But the war demanded another route. The result was the Labrador-Greenland-Iceland route, farther north.

Pioneering by Gen. Fritz.

This route was largely pioneered by Brig. Gen. Lawrence Fritz, commanding officer of the North Atlantic division, army air transport command. Earlier, Lindbergh, Balbo, and others had flown it in experimental flights. But Gen. Fritz was the one who actually pushed the route thru to make it a winter as well as a summer route.

The single greatest factor in its operation is the network of weather reporting stations thruout the arctic and near arctic wastes which tell what the weather ahead is like or likely to be.

BIG SAVING CITED IN SUPER-HIGHWAY ALONG OLD CANAL

Members of the Chicago plan commission noted yesterday that "considerable" money would be saved in constructing a super-highway along the abandoned Illinois and Michigan canal.

H. Evert Kincaid, executive director of the commission, cited the canal's possibilities at a meeting of the commission. Chairman A. H. Mellinger commented that a canal route super-highway would appreciably shorten driving time to the airport. He and other commissioners expressed pleasure that on the route the expense of right of way condemnation would be saved. William Mortimer, spokesman for the county highway department, called the canal super-highway "a cheap job, very economical to construct."

No formal action was taken, as the commission has included the canal route in its plans for a city wide system of super-highways. Early work on the canal roadway has been proposed by Gov. Green and approved by Mayor Kelly.

PORT AUTHORITY TOO BIG FOR CITY ALONE—GREEN

Says State Plan Group Will Deal with Task.

Establishment of a port authority to expand and coördinate Chicago's terminal facilities for rail, air, water, and motor transportation is too broad a project to be undertaken by Chicago alone, Gov. Green declared in a statement yesterday.

Further, said the governor, the need for a Chicago port authority already is under consideration, and will be dealt with by the Illinois post-war planning commission, created by the last general assembly.

Replies to Questions.

Gov. Green's statement was in reply to questions directed at him since the announcement by Mayor Kelly last Oct. 10 that the city is taking steps to organize such an authority and that tentative plans are being drafted by Joshua D'Esposito, project engineer for the city's subway and a representative of the federal works administration.

"Effective solution of these problems by the city government alone is not possible," said the governor. "The city lacks authority to proceed with broad programs for the construction and operation of terminals. The general assembly must confer new powers on some agency to operate in the entire metropolitan area, not just within the city limits.

"The port authority of New York and the board of commissioners of the port of New Orleans, created by the legislatures, with their members appointed by the governors of New York and Louisiana, have the power to issue bonds, purchase, sell, construct, lease, and operate terminal facilities.

Plans Here Not New.

"Under these powers they have been able to construct facilities, pay for them with income bonds, and either lease or operate them for the lines using them. The result has been the development of fine terminal facilities without cost to the taxpayers."

Gov. Green said that plans for similar development in the Chicago area are not new; that he has been studying them a long time.

Development of a Chicago port authority is of vital importance to the entire state, the governor added, and leaders from all parts of the state have expressed their interest and indicated their future coöperation.

FILM SIMULATES BOMB RUNS FOR FLYING TRAINEES

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 20 (AP).—The army air forces lifted secrecy today from a revolutionary method of training its air crews—a gadget which, employing a Norden bombsight, a strip of film, and a mirror, enables a bombardier to simulate almost any situation of combat.

The device, known as the A-6 bomber trainer and brought into production only four months ago, already is in use in many of the AAF's bombardier schools and in addition, overseas, is the means of giving fighter and bomber crews up to the minute previews of their run to any scheduled target, on the basis of "spot" reconnaissance photos.

The trainer is designed primarily to prepare AAF airmen for using the Norden bombsight. The brainchild of Maj. Eduard McKaba of the Midland, Tex., army flying school, it can simulate bombing missions with a wide variety of targets.

Life Size Bomber Nose.

Briefly, it is to the bombardier what the Link trainer is to the pilot, a portable, life size model of a bomber nose complete with bombrack controls, switches, and instruments.

A moving terrain area recorded on film is projected upward thru a small hole in a 6 by 8 foot screen—placed below the bomber—onto an overhead mirror and back to the screen where, thus enlarged, it "unrolls" to the bombardier exactly as would the earth, were he flying over it.

The direction of the terrain's travel is coördinated with the position of the bomber at any speed from 125 to 250 miles an hour and at altitudes from 2,000 to 20,000 feet. Such outside influences as engine noise, temperature, and drift can be introduced, the latter for its effect not alone upon the course of the "plane" but upon the "bombs" as they fall.

Bombs Appear as Lights.

The bombs are represented by a series of tiny lights to the left of the bombardier as he crouches over his bombsight. The "bombs" are releasable, as they would be aloft, singly, "in train," or in salvo.

So complete is the simulation that hits are recorded by tiny pinpoints of flashing light on the screen below. Thus the student bombardier can check his marksmanship with the aid of his instructor, who can halt the strip at any time to point out errors of calculation or judgment. Indicative of the A-6's precise operation, these lights show up only after an interval of seconds corresponding to the time it would require a real bomb to fall from the assumed altitude.

The A-6 was described by Paul C. Rodgers, president of Burton-Rodgers, Inc., its manufacturer here, as the first device of its kind.

AIR TRANSPORT COMMAND WILL HAUL CIVILIANS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—The war department announced today that the air transport command on Jan. 1 will begin carrying civilians on a limited basis. Fares will be comparable to commercial airline rates. Before civilian passengers are accepted, the state department must certify their trips are in the nation's interest.

Civilians will not be carried, the department emphasized, in cases where their transportation will interfere with the movement of military personnel or cargo. Nor will they be accepted as passengers when commercial facilities are available.

COAST GUARD SEIZES A NAZI SHIP SAILING UNDER FALSE COVER

A huge tarpaulin which covered the ship from stem to stern and white bunting were used by the crew of the German trawler Externsteine in an unsuccessful attempt to elude capture by two United States coast guard cutters last Oct. 16.

Robert White.

The story of the camouflage work by the Germans was told here yesterday by Seaman Robert White, 20, of 3945 Fillmore st., who was a member of the crew of the Southwind, one of the two coast guard craft that captured the German trawler off the coast of Greenland where its crew was seeking to establish a radio-weather station.

"The camouflage disguise almost fooled the observers in a coast guard plane who were looking for the trawler," Seaman White said. "Then they noticed that the large white object did not give off the reflections that ice does and they flew lower to investigate. It was then they saw smoke from a stack and the coast guard boats were sent in for the capture."

The Externsteine was well stocked with provisions as well as whisky, candy, and cigarets, White said. He brought some of the candy to his mother, Mrs. Crystal White, when he came home on furlough several days ago.

YULE GREETINGS SENT TO YANKS BY ROOSEVELT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt and members of the high command sent Christmas greetings today to men and women of the military forces thruout the world.

"On behalf of a grateful nation," said Mr. Roosevelt's message, "I send to the men and women of our armed forces everywhere warm and confident good wishes this fourth Christmas of war. On Christmas day, more than on any other day, we remember you with pride and with humility, with anguish and with joy. We shall keep on remembering you all the days of our lives.

"It is therefore with solemn pride that I salute those who stand in the forefront of the struggle to bring back to a suffering world the way of life symbolized by the spirit of Christmas."

SENTENCED TO 3 YEARS IN $12,100 RACE SWINDLE

Daniel C. Peterson, 43, of Tulsa, Okla., was sentenced to three years in prison yesterday after he was found guilty by a jury of 11 men and 1 woman in the federal court of Judge William J. Campbell of swindling Harry W. Nordendale, wealthy president of the Nordendale Manufacturing company, 2100 Fulton st., of $12,100 in a pocketbook race track scheme.

The jury reached its verdict in less than two hours' deliberation. Nordendale had tertified that Peterson and John Hubbell, a fugitive co-defendant, had induced him to withdraw the money from a bank by holding out the lure of a $60,000 sure thing bet at the races.

SEIZE EX-PASTOR LINKED IN U-BOAT SABOTEUR PLOT

Newark, N. J., Dec. 20 (AP).—A former New Jersey minister, a naturalized American of German descent whose name and address in secret ink allegedly were found on a German saboteur who landed from a submarine on the Atlantic coast two years ago, was held in $30,000 bail here today at arraignment on charges of violating the sabotage, censorship, and foreign agents statutes.

Carl Krepper.

The arrest of Carl Emil Ludwig Krepper, 60, Newark, was announced earlier today by the department of justice.

Two Years of Investigation.

The justice department said Krepper had been instructed to establish himself in this country as a contact for German spies, and his arrest was the climax of more than two years of investigation which sprang from a clue—a white pocket handkerchief—found on one of the eight German saboteurs who landed from a submarine in June, 1942. Six of these saboteurs were later executed.

The handkerchief, on examination in an FBI laboratory, was shown to contain the words, "Pas. [pastor] Krepper, route 2, Rahway, New Jersey," and officials said an unsuccessful attempt to locate Krepper thru the message was made by one of the saboteurs before his capture in New York. This attempt failed because the Rahway address was only a mailing address, the federal bureau of investigation said.

One indictment alleges Krepper conspired with Walter Kappe, identified by the FBI as a director of the Nazi sabotage school in Berlin, and his wife, Bertha Krepper, "to injure, interfere with and obstruct the national defense of the United States," and "to use a code and other devices" to conceal messages from censorship.

Charged with Sending Message.

The second indictment charges that about Dec. 19, 1941, Krepper sent a code message, "which was intended to be delivered to the enemies of the United States in Germany." A third bill charges the ex-minister acted as a German agent without notifying the secretary of state.

Federal authorities said the conspiracy was to be carried out by Krepper who was to establish himself as a United States citizen and then provide lodging and other facilities for Nazi secret agents, keeping in touch meanwhile with his wife and Kappe in Germany.

Admits Propaganda Plot.

Krepper received a regular salary from the German government which made payments to his wife in Berlin, federal authorities said.

Krepper has acknowledged, according to the FBI, that he agreed to engage in propaganda work in the United States and to provide a haven for "persecuted" Germans.

The FBI said Krepper arrived in this country Dec. 16, 1941, to begin his work as an alleged contact man, but that Krepper claims he did not undertake the assignment, because of the outbreak of war a few days previously.

In recent months Krepper has been a steward in a Newark club.

The announcement continued: "During his residence in the United States, Krepper has served as pastor of Lutheran churches in Philadelphia and Newark, Rahway and Carteret, N. J., altho he has not been engaged as a minister since his return from Germany in 1941."

Served War Plant Executives.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 20 [Special].—The Downtown club in Newark, where Carl Krepper was employed recently, is a skyscraper eating place much frequented by manufacturers and industrialists, many of them war plant executives.

NEW 'TEAMWORK' SYSTEM INVOKED BY STETTINIUS

Ends Split Responsibility in State Department.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Secretary of State Stettinius made public today his plan for tightening administration and speeding up his department's work.

At the same time he disclosed he is going to make more changes and ask congress for increased appropriations so he can enlarge the department.

The organization was made public just after Under Secretary Joseph C. Grew and four new assistant secretaries took the oath of office in an informal mass ceremony.

Teamwork Is Watchword.

The word Stettinius and his new aids kept repeating when they spoke of the changes was teamwork—reflected in the reorganization chart which eliminated divided responsibility and places all the work under what Stettinius called his eight generals in the field.

These are:

Legal Advisor Green H. Hackworth, Asst. Secretary William L. Clayton in charge of economic affairs, Asst. Secretary Dean Acheson for congressional relations and international conferences, Asst. Secretary James C. Dunn in charge of political affairs outside the western hemisphere, Asst. Secretary Nelson A. Rockefeller in charge of American republic affairs, Special Asst. Leo Pasvolsky in charge of international organization and security affairs, Asst. Secretary Archibald MacLeish in charge of public and cultural relations, and Asst. Secretary Julius C. Holmes in charge of administration.

Two New Aids Named.

Holmes, who now is in Paris cleaning up his job as assistant to Gen. Eisenhower, will return and take the oath next month.

Two new aids were appointed. Charles E. Bohlen, now the department's top Russian expert who accompanied President Roosevelt to Teheran and Cordell Hull to Moscow, will have the new job of liaison officer with the White House.

Stettinius also brought Wilder Foote over from the foreign economics administration as an assistant. While he has no direct charted connection with press relations, Foote is expected to play an important part in Stettinius' public relations.

Michael J. McDermott was continued as special assistant in charge of press relations.

The main new appointment under the reorganization was that of Avra Warren, ambassador to Panama, as director of the office of American republic affairs to take the place of Norman Armour who has been appointed ambassador to Spain.

In a statement accompanying the reorganization chart, Stettinius said "vigorous, alert, and forward looking leadership in the conduct of its foreign relations by our government is more essential now than at any time in our history."

SCHOOL BOARD BARS PROBERS FROM RECORDS

The board of education yesterday denied the National Education association's request for permission to examine its records, buildings, and personnel in connection with an investigation of Chicago's educational system. Permission was requested in a letter addressed to James B. McCahey, president of the board, by Donald Dushane, chairman of the N. E. A. commission for democracy thru education. The request was voted down on motion of B. L. Majewski, vice president of the board.

Mrs. Walter F. Heineman cast the only dissenting vote, asserting that the inquiry should be allowed to go ahead on the ground that if the board has nothing to be ashamed of, the N. E. A. will have to give it a clean bill of health.

Dushane, reached in Washington, said the investigation will go forward anyway; that facts will be gathered from teachers and others and that the findings will be made public. Edward E. Keener, leader of the Chicago unit of N. E. A., said the organization numbers 2,500 members among the city's 12,000 teachers.

PAUL RUSSELL'S SON, 9, FELLED BY LAB FUMES

Overcome by chloroform fumes, Harold Swift Russell, 9, son of Paul S. Russell, vice president of the Harris Trust company, was revived yesterday after rescue squad No. 3 under Lt. John McGuire had applied the inhalator more than an hour. The child's mother, Mrs. Carol Russell, told Hyde Park police he had found the chloroform while exploring a laboratory maintained in the Russell home at 4901 Greenwood av., by his brother, Paul, Jr., 20, a student in the University of Chicago medical school.

Interview

Dr. Peter S. Yovanovich and his wife, Tatiyana, at interview yesterday. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Dr. Peter S. Yovanovich, a young American of Serbian descent who went to Belgrade 11 years ago as a medical student and returned to the United States last month after spending four months in Gen. Mihailovich's headquarters, told the story of his experiences yesterday at the Serbian National Defense council offices, 185 N. Wabash av. His wife, Tatiyana, whom he married in Belgrade, is with him.

Dr. Yovanovich is returning to his parents' home in Ironton, Minn., for the Christmas holiday, after which he expects to enter medical work in this country. He said the British are supporting Marshal Tito, leader of the communistic Partisans, and refuse to allow any stories favoring Gen. Mihailovich's Chetniks thru their military censorship.

VERSIONS DIFFER IN COURT STORY OF NIGHT BRAWL

The varied versions of the Carney-Batt-Blott brawl in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel last Thanksgiving night filled the air of Municipal Judge John T. Zuris' courtroom with recrimination and contradiction yesterday.

Individual versions were offered by the following participants: William P. Carney, 60, of 1200 Lake Shore dr., president of an oil equipment company; his wife, Ann, 47; Nathan Batt, 27, of 806 Lawrence av., a restaurateur [all of whom are charged or counter charged with disorderly conduct], and Edgar Blott and his wife, Ann, of 2948 Pine Grove av., who were table guests of the Carneys.

Hotel employes and other guests added their versions of the tumult which seemed to have had its conception in heckling remarks which the Carney party directed at a jugglers' act.

Despite the conflict of testimony, one fact stood undisputed. Batt knocked down Carney so hard that his head shattered the base of a potted palm which tottered and fell on him. Batt's charges that Carney struck his mother, Mrs. Tillie Batt, were denied. The hearing had become most reminiscent of the Tommy Dorsey-Jon Hall balcony battle trial when Judge Zuris adjourned it until 9 a. m. today.

OFFSPRING IN SEARCH OF A PARENT.

According to Mr. Charles Chaplin, he didn't snore the night of Dec. 23, 1942, and nothing else happened; but there is the baby and Miss Berry demands that her child be given a name [she means a last name]. According to Mr. Roosevelt, there is no formal signed and sealed document known as the Atlantic Charter. There were just some scribblings committed by himself and Mr. Churchill, and nobody knows where they are.

Tots and things seem to be conceived in the most offhand way. When Miss Berry appeared in the bedroom Mr. Chaplin seized the occasion to read her a homily. He cawn't remember anything beyond that. When Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, being met together aboard H. M. S. Prince of Wales, decided to whack out a little rhetoric they committed their thoughts to paper in the same absent-minded way. The charter was a child of forgetfulness, just like little Carol Ann.

Nobody now can lay his hands on the original of the charter. The words were given a considerable currency and became known to people in various distant parts, arousing hopes which have been denied by subsequent events. Now Mr. Roosevelt says the charter was no more than a memorandum. Memoranda are designed to recall something to the author's mind. The charter evokes no recollection of principles in the mind of Mr. Churchill as he decrees the partition of Poland, nor is Mr. Roosevelt's memory stirred.

Mr. Churchill is so forgetful of the portentous declaration that he amends it out of hand, confusing his own declarations on British foreign policy with the original text. Mr. Roosevelt finds that rhetoric begets nothing more profitable than more rhetoric. His state department tortures constructions to reconcile the rape of Poland with the charter. And the charter itself has disappeared even more completely from the face of the earth than is implied by the mislaying of the tangible document. The spirit as well as the letter is as if it had never been born. Even the Prince of Wales has shared in the general destruction of the evidence. It is at the bottom of the South China sea, where the Japs put it.

In the case of Miss Berry, if her story is accepted, the conception was practically at gun point. She came into the bedroom waving a revolver and the reluctant Mr. Chaplin was pressed into the responsibilities of parenthood. If Mr. Roosevelt cast himself in the role of villain and forced Mr. Churchill to sign the papers both parties knew it was amiable humbug. Mr. Churchill was willing to make concessions to the idealism of the American people if it would serve to get them into war. He well knew that commitments are made to be repudiated.

In the case of the charter the shotgun wedding is not for the purpose of uniting Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt in the assumption of responsibility for their offspring. The irate parents have gone off hunting a fall guy to legitimate their love child and the state department is found blessing the Polish partition as a settlement "by friendly conference and agreement." Thus Russia becomes the wronged maiden and the Poles are confronted with a blunderbuss and told their wedding to the soviet union is by "mutual agreement."

The child may know its father, but here are two who don't. Pirandello once wrote a play called "Six Characters in Search of an Author." There are resemblances and differences in the present instances. The authors flee their offspring. Mr. Chaplin looks at the baby and says "Not mine." Mr. Roosevelt ponders the charter and remarks, "A mere memorandum." It would seem as if people ought to enter into the grave responsibilities of parenthood in a less frivolous spirit.

SUPPLY BOTTLENECK.

The Germans still hold four of the principal French Atlantic ports thru which supplies may be brought in for the American armies. The Germans are installed in the ports of St. Nazaire, Lorient, and La Rochelle, and hold the mouth of the Gironde river at Pointe de Grave, keeping us from using Bordeaux, the largest port between Lorient and the Spanish coast. Another German garrison holds Dunkirk, but its port facilities were made almost useless when the British retreated thru it in 1940.

German strategy of leaving strong garrisons to hold ports hundreds of miles behind the fighting line is unprecedented. Many Japanese island garrisons in the Pacific have been bypassed and isolated, and can no longer cause us harm, but the Germans left their garrisons by choice and these port troops are doing active damage. It is estimated by the French information service that there are 70,000 combatant troops and 50,000 auxiliary troops in Lorient, St. Nazaire, La Rochelle, and at the mouth of the Gironde.

The German garrisons hinder the full development of the allies' supply system, form a small but constant drain on men and equipment, and constitute one of the barriers to the economic recovery of France. One of the major obstacles to French coal production, for instance, is the lack of pit props, which normally come from the Gironde area. They cannot be brought by sea because of the German hold on the mouth of the river, and because of lack of coal they cannot be transported by railroad. Thus production of coal is hampered, and without coal French transport and industry cannot be restored. Without full assistance from French transport, the supply problem of our armies is aggravated, and without a normal functioning of industry the French cannot equip their troops.

The German strategy of denying us as many ports as possible has undoubtedly slowed up our armies and limited the assistance which the French can offer. The reduction of Brest, Le Havre, Calais, Boulogne, and St. Malo proved that German garrisons would not quit until they were crushed. Gen. Eisenhower was left in a dilemma. Without full use of all major French ports, his armies were impeded in their assault upon Germany, and without a diversion of troops from the front, which would prevent him from maintaining his grinding pressure on Germany, he could not open up the ports.

It is not yet a Hobson's choice, but Gen. Eisenhower may eventually be forced to eliminate the German garrisons and restore the holdout ports before proceeding to seek the main decision over Germany.

HOW TO INVEST A BONUS.

Year-end bonuses and extra dividend payments make it urgent for many people to decide what to do with a sizable package of money right now.

One investor who, over many years, has been remarkably successful in safeguarding his principal and even increasing it, while obtaining a good rate of return, makes it a point to buy "E" bonds each year up to the full amount permitted, that is $3,750 cash value for himself and the same amount for his wife. He has been buying savings bonds for eight years, and in two years more the oldest issues [originally called series "A"] will begin to mature. He and his wife together will then have an annual income of $2,500 a year from his government, with the principal never subject to reduction or impairment. By purchasing bonds at the discounted price to replace those maturing he can have this substantial annuity for the rest of his life, or at least for nine years after the government stops selling "E" bonds. His annuity will net him nearly 3 per cent. If he should decide to modify this program at any time he can always get all of his money back with interest.

This investor has a portfolio of other investments, some AAA bonds, some lower grade bonds, some preferred stocks, and lots of equities, but he considers his "E" bonds as the foundation. His other securities, he recognizes, may turn out good or bad, dependent upon many unknown factors, such as the length of the war, the size of the national income, government tax policies, the volume of unemployment, the duration of the post-war boom in civilian goods, and the commercial rate of interest. But whatever happens, there is that $2,500 a year from "E" bonds he is sure of—enough for him and his wife to live on in a pinch.

An additional advantage, as this investor sees it, is that the income on the "E" bonds doesn't come in currently, and it needs to be declared only as the interest is received at the maturity of the bonds. That is important, as the tax rate in the future is expected to go down.

This professional man's program and his reasons for following it may appeal to others with money to invest, who have not yet bought the maximum amount of "E" bonds in 1944. Bonds bought before Dec. 30 will be counted in the 6th war loan drive. The director of the drive in Cook county, Francis M. Knight, has just called attention to the fact that purchases of these bonds must increase markedly in the remaining days if Chicago's quota is to be reached.

SMOKELESS RAILROADS.

The president of the New York Central, Mr. Gustav Metzman, had a few words to say about locomotives the other day in the course of a speech before the Economic club in Detroit. He said:

"Looking at conventional steam locomotives—the kind that puff—we have locomotives on the drawing boards that we hope will outdo anything now on the road in power, performance, and capacity. The gas turbine holds much promise of another kind of railroad locomotive. The field of diesel power is as changing as it is active. And in addition, the electrification of heavy traffic lines is definitely in the picture. . . . We can be sure of just one thing when it comes to our post-war locomotives: that we shall have a lot of changes."

We're glad to hear that because it encourages the hope that some day before too long the railroads entering Chicago will no longer pollute the air with smoke. For many years the city government tried to persuade the railroads to electrify their Chicago terminals, and sometimes it looked as if the goal would be achieved, but one thing or another and finally the depression put an end to all such plans, at least for the time being. The moment came when it was obviously of no use to urge the railroads to spend money for capital improvements when half of the lines were in receivership and many of the others seemed headed for the wringer. Thus far the only success came in the electrification of the Illinois Central's suburban services.

Now the outlook is again more hopeful. The railroads are in better financial condition and, as Mr. Metzman has pointed out, electrification of heavy traffic lines is being given close study. Besides, new kinds of locomotives that do not spout smoke are coming into use. The railroads have all had enough experience with diesels by this time to know that they can be used to pull heavy trains. Chicago would still prefer electrification of the terminals here but expects at the very least that one or another kind of smokeless locomotives will be substituted in the near future for the present equipment.

Two cheers for the Indianapolis war worker who denies he remains idle every time he is called out on strike. Says he improves his leisure by writing peppy letters to the soldiers.—Detroit News.

Getting into the holiday spirit, a local character opened up a parcel today and cried, "Hooray! The laundry. Just what I wanted."—Detroit News.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS?

The first observance of Christmas on American soil should be credited to the early Norse discovery and placed in the year 1000, when Leif Eriksen seems to have spent the winter on the coast of this continent. There is nothing in the vague and meager Icelandic records of this voyage about religious rites or holiday festivity, but there is ample evidence elsewhere in the sagas that Leif was a Christian. It is a reasonable assumption that many members of his crew were also recent converts from paganism.

* * *

Before this voyage Leif, son of the roaring old pagan who colonized Greenland, had spent a year or two in Norway in the retinue of King Olaf Trygvasson. Olaf had been converted by Roman missionaries and was spreading his new faith vigorously. His methods were ruthless, and when he proclaimed to his followers, "Be baptized, or else!" the vikings obeyed without changing their pagan natures. But Leif was a sincere convert, according to excellent testimony, and returned to his home in Greenland as a king's missionary to convert his heathenish, manslaughtering parent, if possible.

* * *

On that first American Christmas, Leif did what was seemly, no doubt. He had no priest in his crew, and may not have been well informed about Christian observances, but he was strong in the faith and knew that the birthday of the Redeemer whom he had accepted should be recognized. Perhaps he remembered a few words of a prayer in Latin, and recited them. . . . Anyway, it was the first Christmas in this land.

* * *

In Leif's band of adventurers was an old character named Tyrker, a kind of major domo who was not a Norseman, and is generally believed to have been a German. He is the man who discovered the grapes of Vinland. If he was a German we may feel confident that he recalled the customs of his native land. Perhaps he set up a Christmas tree and passed around flagons of crude, raw wine of his own fermenting, and sang folk songs that his viking companions couldn't understand. The tree could not have been illuminated, but you may be sure that Tyrker was.

ALTAR OF LOVELINESS.

Take up your quest for lyric sustenance
When sunrise kindles on the farthest hill,
When suddenly the dawn moves up to fill
The sky with primrose pomp and circumstance.
Take to the autumn forest in your search:
Find bright and bitter berries scorned by frost
Where broken branches lie like antlers lost
In duels with the wind. The dreaming birch
Cradles an empty nest; tall poplars pose;
Beneath your feet the earth is resolute
Know, in this hour the sun lifts with its fire,

Holiday Rules for the Pooch.

1. You are not to help yourself to nuts from the wooden bowl on the coffee table.
2. When the doorbell rings, you are not to rush to the front door, barking at the top of your voice; it may be neighbors bearing gifts.
3. When neighbors come in, you are not to nibble speculatively at slacks or overcoats; after all, this is Christmas and the good will business applies to you, too.
4. When the turkey is taken from the oven you are not to stand in the middle of the kitchen floor and drool. Remember, you are not supposed to have poultry bones, anyway.
5. It's all right for you to growl and scuffle with tissue paper like a two month old pup.
6. Hey! No! That's the Christmas tree!

Casual.

THE THIRD CHRISTMAS.

We'll call it Christmas. Just as we've always done;
We'll hang bright-berried wreaths outside the door.
We'll search for trees, and pick the tallest one
To place our gifts around it on the floor.

We'll call it Christmas. Just as in other years
We'll listen to the carols sweetly sung,
And if we're not successful with our tears,
Well, something got into our eyes and stung.

We'll call it Christmas. We cannot make it so,
Not in its sense of cheer and gayeties,
For we are in need of prayer and faith aglow—
(This is his third Christmas overseas!)

M. L. S. writes: "I was discharged from the navy three months ago and my brother just recently has been released also. We'd like to buy a farm of 800 acres, but neither of us individually has enough cash or credit to swing it. Could we buy it jointly and use our credits under the G. I. law?"

In a recent announcement the veterans' administration said: "Two or more veterans may join in a farming operation and effect a joint loan for that purpose." Under these conditions each veteran would be charged individually with his proportionate part of the guaranty. The total amount guaranteed may not be more than 50 per cent of the loan, or in any event not more than $2,000 for each veteran. In the case of default under this type of loan, the veterans will be adjudged as if they were several debtors rather than one joint debtor.

SKIN BLEMISHES FROM DRUGS.

We are all familiar with the skin irritation that may come to the sensitive individual from the use of dyes and tints utilized by cosmeticians. While serious reactions are not common, should discomfort ensue, it may be intense. Furthermore, the affected region, usually the face, may become swollen beyond recognition.

Drug eruptions are far more general and every now and then one who has resorted to some well advertised remedy on his own initiative, whether he requires it or not, will complain of itching or burning of the cuticle. More often than not, an eczemalike dermatitis will present itself, accompanied by tiny blisters. This stage is usually followed by weeping and scaling.

Certain sedative compounds may give rise to puffiness of the features, the hands, and the feet, as well as a sense of fullness within the throat. Even such popular remedies as the salicylates [aspirin] may cause a reddish blush. If scratching is indulged in bacteria may be planted and typical attacks of impetigo may occur. One of the objections to the use of bromides and iodides is that they may bring on a crop of pimples which resemble acne.

The list might be extended indefinitely. Until the patient employs a given substance, no one can say exactly how he will respond. The principal ingredient in a highly publicized laxative is a coal tar preparation which depends for its effect on setting up a mild irritation within the bowel. But it may not stop at that point. The epidermis may mirror a systemic reaction. In fact, with susceptible persons, the outer covering of the body may rebel sharply, with the appearance of painful, smarting lesions.

Physicians are on the lookout constantly for the origin of surface blemishes and, if the sufferer gives a history of taking a drug, it should be stopped immediately. The usual rule is to prescribe a mild laxative such as senna tea. In the meantime, compresses wrung out of boric acid or a dilute solution of potassium permanganate may be applied. If inflammation is mild, calamine lotion or zinc oxide may be helpful. The reason why more potent compounds are not advised is that they make a bad matter worse.

Not infrequently, liver extract, injected deep within the muscles, exerts such a powerful influence upon the blood that the circulating fluid will be able to neutralize the irritants. If the raised areas are likely to bleed [hemorrhagic], both vitamins C and K are administered in generous doses.

The sulfonamides are now utilized so extensively that doctors are on the watch for signs of poisoning. One of the early manifestations is a rash. As a rule, this need not be anticipated if the chemical is guarded with adequate alkalies.

It should not be necessary to repeat the caution that no one should swallow a medicine unless he knows what it is, what it will do, and that toxic symptoms will not be produced. This refers with equal force to skin contacts, as a few ointments will act with the power of flame.

SPINE'S END.

P. R. writes: When I sit for any length of time, I find it hard to rise because my tailbone becomes so sore. It does not bother me when I am up and about. Can you advise me?

REPLY.

There is a very real condition, known as "coccyalgia"—pain in the coccyx [the small bones at the end of the spinal column]. Arthritis may be responsible. An X-ray of the region may disclose the cause.

NOT STRAIGHT.

F. L. writes: I am 16 years old and the school physician tells me I have a deviated septum. What does this mean?

REPLY.

The middle partition of the nose has gone awry. This may prevent the free passage of air on the crowded side. More often than not, the condition has no significance. Few individuals have perfectly symmetrical interiors. On the other hand, correction may be in order.

EFFECT OF DRUG.

G. T. writes: If a person must take belladonna [for a spastic colon], is there any way to relieve the resulting mouth dryness?

REPLY.

It's a part of the picture, if you are to obtain the full effect of the drug. There are some compensations, however. Use cold cream on the lips, and suck chipped ice. If the symptom becomes too annoying you can reduce the dose, if your physician agrees.

Notes of a Pilgrim Making Little Progress.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The sky above this city of angels is filled with bombers now as it has been for two years. They fly singly, low and purringly ominous, or they fly in formation, so high they look like a row of tiny crosses. They, and the proximity of that bland, illimitable water called the Pacific, tossing against the beaches and rocky cliffs that same wave which possibly washed the coast of Leyte, or the coral of Tarawa, or the shores of Formosa, give as much unreality to this, the Christmas season, as does the weather.

It is easier now to visualize Christmas under a palm tree, for here one is under palm trees, many of them of the grandfather variety with full beards drooping half way down. But it is difficult to readjust one's self to poinsettias the way they come here, for they come on trees, or they come growing in the open ground, acre upon acre, a wave of pure scarlet. This is not proper, as all we non-Californians know. Poinsettias come in pots and are for the privileged, not for the public. Still, right or wrong, the sight of a twisted tree covered with these radiant blossoms next to a magnolia dotted with soft ivory blossoms is a lovely and breath taking thing.

Aside from that, the attempt here to observe the traditional Christmas of snow bound regions is pathetic. Christmas carols merely sound wistful and nostalgic when the weather is drowsy and brooding, when the hills are covered with the soft yellow flowerets and silver leaves of the mimosa, and when you waste half of every hour chasing an annoying fly. But there is nothing wistful about Hollywood's Christmas. It is as fanciful and farcical as ever, altho by no means as elaborate. Hollywood's Christmas trees, altho you might not recognize them as such, are first dyed pale pink, baby blue, lavender, silver, and bright orange. Presumably you buy the one [vacant lots are filled with them] that matches your mood or personality and then go to work to change the interior decoration of your home so all will fit. Where orange comes in on all this no one has bothered to explain.

Back in peace time things were better. Then every lamp post on Hollywood's Central boulevards was draped with icicles and enormous, glistening snowmen, blinding and desperately alien figures in the brilliant California sunshine, and the public wandered happily about gazing at them and hoping that just one little drop of this beautiful artificial snow and ice would melt. Just one. Some of the more elaborate homes in the movie colony even had a life-size Santa, complete with eight reindeer and packed sleigh, perched on their roof tops, and Hollywood had not merely one Christmas parade, but a Christmas parade every night, each complete with one or more movie stars and a master Santa Claus. That stopped with the war time blackout. The blackout now has been lifted, but the city is only partly lighted up. Street lamps still wear their black hoods, few of the large electric signs have gone back on, and the midnight closing for bars is still on.

Nor will the great Tournament of Roses parade, an annual New Year's day event at Pasadena, take place this season. The last of the rose festivals with which Pasadena won its fame was held Jan. 1, 1941. Plans were all made for the 1942 one, but Dec. 7 stopped that. War time restrictions on vehicles had much to do with its halt, but the true reason, a float designer revealed, is that the cost of flowers out here has been prohibitive since the exodus of the Japs from the west coast. The return of the Japanese is regarded with considerable trepidation by even the most tolerant. Judged solely as an economic issue, it looks difficult. Where will they live? Housing here, as everywhere, is non existent, all vacancies having gone long ago to transients, war importations, and aircraft workers. Add the human and personal factor to that, and you have one fine mess.

NO PART TIME WAR JOBS.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—From the accounts in the press and over the air one would assume that there existed a tremendous shortage of man power in our war plants. "If you have any spare time, call at your nearest United States employment office" we are reminded many times daily over the radio.

I telephoned my nearest employment office yesterday and discovered that if there is a labor shortage, it must be news to them.

I was seeking a job after 5 p. m., when my day time work ends. I wanted to work five or six hours and would accept anything they had to offer, anywhere. The clerk said that she was sorry, but they didn't have a thing to offer. When I questioned her about the tremendous publicity campaigns designed to encourage people to offer their services, she replied, "That is the general public opinion [that part time jobs are available] but we don't have a thing to offer you except on a full eight hour shift."

How many thousands of men and women are employed in banks, offices, schools, stores during the day who could and would work four to six hours in a war plant evenings? J. M. C.

"WEALTH IS BUT A NAME."

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Your recent editorial, "The Life and Death of Wealth," recalls the well known lines of Oliver Goldsmith in "The Deserted Village" when he saw that "half a tillage stints the smiling plain." He wrote:

"This wealth is but a name
Which leaves our useful products still the same."

Useful products and the continued production of them are the real and only wealth of America. Money, bonds, stock certificates, insurance policies, and so on, are merely representations of real wealth. If real wealth continues to decrease while representations of it continue to increase, disastrous inflation is inevitable. Your timely editorial should be widely distributed.

WANTS PRIORITIES FOR G. I.s.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—There are a lot of men serving overseas who have never had a furlough. Some mere boys, others fathers who may never come home again.

When furloughs are allotted, as we understand, it's on a rotation or percentage basis—due to shortage of space on transports and planes—yet, every few weeks, we see pictures in the paper of English, Australian, and Egyptian wives and babies being sent over.

I certainly don't object to what choice a man makes in marriage, but if he marries a foreigner, let her stay where she is until all the boys come home first. This is the sentiment of a lot of people. A SOLDIER'S WIFE.

WHILE RUSSIA AND BRITAIN PLOT.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—I have a son in an English hospital recovering from his second wound since D-day and I'd like to get him back in one piece. I am not interested in a greater Britain or Russia to the extent that I feel he should go back and take his chances again, while our allies build their fences instead of fighting Germany. There are many others like me looking to Washington for action. Sen. Brooks speaks the thoughts of the thousands.

HENRY WILLIAMS.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE CRAZY.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—If our friend, Henry A. Miller of Riverside, were a trifle less gullible, he probably would not become discouraged so easily. I refer to his friend who worked as expediter in two different war plants and is now out looking for another job where he can find something to do.

I have been expediting in a war plant for the past two years and I have found no time to lie down on a bench, but I could furnish Mr. Miller with a list of names of men who had tried out in this same department as expediters and after a fair trial had to be let out. If they should happen into Mr. Miller's office they would probably tell the same story as his friend.

Some people wouldn't recognize work if it were spelled with a capital "W" and italicized. Good expediting calls for vision and forethought, combined with plenty of drive and punch. Some people don't have it, but it's so easy to excuse your failure by blaming the company.

As our assistant general manager once told me: "You don't have to be crazy to be an expediter, but it helps."

CHIEF EXPEDITER.

USELESS TO LEGISLATE HAPPINESS.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—There are two words in our vocabulary which are used recklessly. These are "liberty" and "security," words that are irreconcilable. It is an interesting speculation as to whether personal security was debated or even considered by the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Note carefully how they used the word "pursuit" and not "attainment" in the phrase "pursuit of happiness." I think it is a fair deduction that the signers did not believe that government per se could be an agency to bring about happiness in the individual life. EUGENE MULLANEY.

BUT HE'S INDISPENSABLE.

Coldwater, Mich., Dec. 13.—It was not so long ago that our President tried to force a bill thru congress to limit all salaries to $25,000. He must have meant all except his own, for I note they are now going to introduce a bill to pay him $100,000. This bill could hardly have been drawn without his knowledge, or should we say connivance. GEO. C. TURNER.

TO RELIEVE HOSPITAL CROWDING.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Now that the hospitals are overcrowded and there is a dire scarcity of nurses, why can't there be an enforcement of the slippery walk ordinance? Property owners, or their representatives, even janitors, should be forced to put ashes on those sheets of ice before and around their buildings. Parking lots are flagrant offenders, too.

M'FETRIDGE PUT INTO PETRILLO'S PARK BOARD JOB

Mayoral Appointment Is Quickly Affirmed.

William L. McFetridge, American Federation of Labor union leader and director of the salvage bureau of the office of civilian defense in Chicago, was appointed a commissioner of the Chicago park district yesterday by Mayor Kelly.

W. L. McFetridge.

The appointment, confirmed by unanimous vote of the city council, filled the vacancy created last May by the resignation of James C. Petrillo, head of the musicians' union, who said his union duties conflicted with his park position. McFetridge will serve the uncompleted term of Petrillo, which expires next April 5.

Drop Rules to Confirm.

McFetridge is president of the Building Service Employes International union [AFL], and president of the Chicago Flat Janitors union, local No. 1. On motion of Ald. Quinn [50th], the council suspended the rules for immediate confirmation of the appointment. Several aldermen spoke in praise of McFetridge. Council rules, if not suspended, postpone council action on appointments until the next meeting after they are announced by the mayor.

"I'll do the best job possible for the people, for whom the parks are intended," McFetridge said later.

Dr. Alfred A. Strauss, a physician who lives at 1450 Lake Shore dr., was appointed a member of the Chicago recreation commission.

Taxicab Hearing Today.

Ald. Quinn [50th], chairman of the committee on local transportation, said it will begin hearings today on charges by Ald. Cohen [4th] that taxicab drivers have refused to carry passengers to their destinations and have overcharged on fares. Cohen said he has heard that some drivers have refused to give service outside the loop, and have not pro-rated fares among group riders. The city vehicle license commissioner has caused police to arrest several drivers for refusing to accept fares.

The committee on special assessments, of which Ald. Duffy [19th] is chairman, was directed on Duffy's request to develop a program for foreclosing tax delinquent vacant properties. Duffy said tax liens amounting to 20 million dollars are on the books against property which he said will not be eligible for building purposes after the war unless the taxes are cleared.

A proposed $84,596,000 sewer construction program, recommended by the engineering board of review, was referred to the council planning committee. The sewers would be built after the war in north and south sections of the city.

Today Year's Shortest, for Winter's Arrival

Chicago's lake front staged a dress rehearsal yesterday for the annual appearance of winter, scheduled to arive at 6:15 p. m. today. Piers extending out into the lake were covered with ice that gradually thickened as waves splashed the wooden structures. Today, the shortest of the year, will have only 9 hours and 7 minutes of daylight.

The Christmas spirit in Chicago gained momentum yesterday with the holding of countless pre-Christmas parties, and the arrival home of thousands of Chicagoans, in and out of the services, for the holidays.

Among the pre-Christmas parties was one given at the Spalding School for Crippled Children. The Parents' Association of Handicapped Children entertained nursery and kindergarten members while the West Town Kiwanis club entertained older pupils.

PAROLED WOMAN SLAYER SEIZED; BODY IS FOUND

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20 [Special].—Mrs. Louise Peete, sentenced to life imprisonment in 1921 for the murder of Jacob C. Denton, wealthy oil and mine promoter, and paroled in 1939, was taken into custody by police tonight. Lee Borden Judson, 67, a bank messenger, who claimed he was her husband, also was seized.

A few hours later police found the body of a woman buried in a back yard at Pacific Palisades, at near-by Santa Monica. Capt. Thad Brown said the body is believed to be that of Mrs. Martha R. Logan, Mrs. Peete's parole sponsor and employer. Mrs. Peete had worked for her as housekeeper. Mrs. Logan was last seen June 1.

The trial of Mrs. Peete for the Denton murder was one of the sensational trials following World War I. She was his tenant. He disappeared June 2, 1920—one day less than 24 years before Mrs. Logan's disappearance. His body was found buried in the basement of his home and Mrs. Peete was convicted of murdering him and burying the body.

CONVICT FATHER IN DROWNING OF HIS SON IN RIVER

Coshocton, O., Dec. 20 (AP).—Warren Patterson, 31, Ashland, O., machinist, was convicted in Common Pleas court tonight of first degree murder in connection with the drowning of his 18 months old son, Larry, last Sept. 27. The verdict, included a recommendation for mercy, carries a penalty of life imprisonment.

Patterson was accused of having dropped the baby and another son, Raymond, 7, in the Mohican river. Larry drowned but Raymond crawled to safety. He and his twin brothers, Gene and Glen, 8, who Patterson left at the roadside, were found later.

EXPERT OFFERS PLAN TO ASSIST DIVERSION AIMS

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Thru the construction of relatively simple control works, water could be made to flow from the Wisconsin river into Lake Michigan in amounts more than sufficient to offset the increased diversion thru the drainage canal which Chicago desires; moreover, the project would benefit, not only Chicago and Illinois, but also the nation as a whole.

These are the opinions of Harold L. Geisse of Wausau, Wis., former Chicago and Wisconsin public utility man, now a public utility adviser. In an interview yesterday, he brought forth facts and made proposals of which the following is the substance:

The Wisconsin river, approaching Portage from the north and west, begins near that city the great turn which is to carry it back west to the Mississippi. The Fox river coming in from the east, turns north near Portage to begin its journey to Lake Winnebago and Green Bay [an inlet from Lake Michigan].

Short Distance Between Rivers.

At one point the waters destined for the Mississippi are only about one and one-half miles from those bound for Lake Michigan. Moreover, the Wisconsin is eight feet higher than the Fox.

In early times, some surplus Wisconsin river water used to spill over into the Fox river valley. Later a canal was built which still exists, altho it is shallow and useless for navigation. If water were to be taken from the Wisconsin in large quantities here, the flow of the Fox would be increased and a correspondingly large volume would reach Lake Michigan.

To obtain this extra water, existing water reservoirs would have to be enlarged and supplemented to contain the flood waters from the upper Wisconsin and its tributaries. As a start, works could be constructed to bottle up 100 billion cubic feet of water per year in the upper reaches. It could be fed into the Fox river at Portage and thus reach Lake Michigan.

Benefit to Fox River Valley.

No harm, but actual benefit would be the result on the Fox, for the river can carry far more than its present volume and an increased flow would help the development of electric power along its banks. As to the Wisconsin, flood water which is either wasted by running off, or which comes down river at undesirable times, would be diverted or would be fed into the river when it could take it.

If the two great water systems of the Mississippi and the Great Lakes should be connected by a large capacity canal the nation would come into possession of an alternate water route from the Lake Superior iron ore producing country to blast furnaces on the lower lakes.

Industry Now Handicapped.

At present, the vast bulk of the iron ore moves from Lake Superior into the lower lakes via Sault Ste. Marie, which has been called the Achilles' heel of America because of its vulnerability.

[Chicago desires increased diversion from Lake Michigan thru the drainage canal for sanitary reasons and also because the canal is a vital link in the all-American seaway from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. Lake states and shipping interests have successfully fought the city's proposals on the ground that lake levels were being lowered. The 100 billion cubic feet of water per year which, as a start, would be impounded on the upper Wisconsin and its tributaries thru Geisse's plan would provide a large fraction—perhaps more than a third—of the increased diversion which Chicago asks.]

65,876 COUNTY '43 REALTY TAX APPEALS HEARD

NUBBINS ENJOYS FIRST DAY HOME —R'ARING TO GO

Cheyenne, Wyo., Dec. 20 (AP).—Forest [Nubbins] Hoffman felt well enough today—his first at home in a month—for a long ride in a wagon pulled by his father.

He is finally tired of opening gifts from well wishers thruout the nation and gladly turned the task over to his mother when his father suggested the wagon ride.

EXPERTS SCAN TRACTION PLAN STUDY BY STATE

Traction experts took a cautious attitude yesterday toward the news that the Illinois post-war planning commission is studying a new traction unification plan based on the system which has been found successful in Boston, Mass.

Virtually all of them said they were not familiar in detail with the Boston scheme, which has combined municipal and private ownership, and could not comment on its provisions. Nearly all, however, said that they were pleased that a state body such as the commission was evincing a serious interest in Chicago's transportation problems.

"We are anxious to get all the interested authorities to talk over their conflicting aims," said Ald. Quinn [50th], chairman of the city council committee on local transportation.

Mayor Kelly, whose economic advisory council recommended months ago that the Boston plan be given thoro consideration, said he feared the commission was drawing "a plan to kill the municipal ownership idea for Chicago" and that it was an attempt to revive the "old metropolitan district scheme."

Among others who welcomed the entry of the state into the traction planning were Judge Michael L. Igoe of the federal District court, who is now in charge of the surface and elevated lines, both in bankruptcy, and State Sen. Daley [D., Chicago], who is a member of the post-war commission.

HUSBAND, $5,000 GONE 14 YEARS, ASKS NAME BACK

There was a whirlwind courtship and a honeymoon to New York, then her husband, William, 50, excused himself and left her waiting in the concourse of Grand Central station, Mrs. Mary Phelps, 44, of 6919 Princeton av., told Judge John A. Sbarbaro in Superior court yesterday.

Mrs. Phelps, represented by Atty. John W. Bennett, said she had been waiting since Aug. 1, 1939 [altho only a few hours of this period in Grand Central station] and she said she was tired. She said she gave Phelps her savings of $5,000 on the train to New York.

"All I hope to get back now," she told Judge Sbarbaro, who granted her a divorce, "is my maiden name of Kelly."

COURT REBUKES ATTORNEYS IN POLICE HEARING

Judge Joseph Graber of Superior court yesterday told attorneys in the litigation over jobs of six former police captains and one former police lieutenant, who were fired last summer, they would have to go elsewhere if they wanted to fight physically or legally. He stopped a squabble between Corporation Counsel Hodes and Atty. Isadore Goldstein, who represents Capt. Eugene Barry, by telling them they could have their "Roman holiday" in the Appellate or Supreme court.

Goldstein read to the court a paragraph from the petition recently filed by Hodes in the Appellate court asking a writ of supersedeas to keep Barry off the police force. It read:

"Granting of a supersedeas here will place the appellants [the city] in a position in which they can effectively resist a mandamus suit to reinstate the plaintiff [Capt. Barry]. Refusal of this court to grant a supersedeas will leave the appellants with no defense and will require reinstatement of the plaintiff."

The Appellate court refused to grant the supersedeas, but Hodes refused to advise Police Commissioner Allman to restore Barry. The city is to file further pleadings before Judge Graber today regarding the other policemen, after which Judge Graber is expected to rule.

EX-SEN. MOSES, 75, DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Career Highlighted by Fight on League.

Concord, N. H., Dec. 20 [Special].—George Higgins Moses, 75, United States senator from New Hampshire from 1918 to 1933 and president pro tempore of the senate for eight years, died tonight at his home from coronary thrombosis.

George Moses.

He had been ill in a Concord hospital for more than a year and had returned to his home only a few days ago for the Christmas holidays. Before going to the hospital he had lived in quiet retirement here since losing his senate seat in the 1932 Roosevelt landslide.

Fought Wilson on League.

Moses was one of the leaders of the Republican group who fought Woodrow Wilson on the league of nations issue. He took the stand that the treaty left the American nation in the role of umpire and said he "did not wish to see the umpire beaned with a pop bottle."

An apt phrasemaker, his best remembered phrase was probably the "sons of the wild jackass," which he coined in referring to a group of southern and midwestern senators who had teamed up in a farm bloc. He stood his ground when rebuked from the senate floor on this occasion, observing "if a more fitting phrase for this gyrating crowd that is running the senate can be found, I'll adopt it."

Moses came into public notice when appointed minister to Greece and Montenegro by President Taft in 1909. Three years later, on an early morning ride with the king of Montenegro, he saw the first shots of the Balkan war fired.

Elected to Senate in 1918.

Returning to the United States he entered politics and was a delegate to the Republican national convention in 1916. Two years later he was elected to the senate to fill out the unexpired term of the late Jacob H. Gallinger. He was twice reëlected.

Moses' widow and his only son, Gordon, were with him when he died.

Beverly Hills, Cal., Dec. 20 (AP).—The ermine-garbed body of Lupe Velez will lie in state at Forest Lawn mortuary for three hours tomorrow morning before funeral services are held Friday and the body is removed to Mexico City for burial.

AWAIT NEW U. S. ACTION IN WARD DETROIT STRIKE

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 20 (AP).—Strikers at four Montgomery Ward stores in the Detroit area ended another day on picket lines today with both strikers and management awaiting federal intervention in the 12 day old dispute.

Reports from Washington indicated that Economic Stabilizer Vinson was engaged in a meeting with members of the war labor board, who had referred the strike to him Monday after the company had declined to accept WLB edicts to settle the dispute.

A question of union jurisdiction was injected into the Detroit situation today when an AFL spokesman wrote to President Roosevelt asserting that the AFL Retail Clerks' union had a majority of workers at two of the four stores. The claim was denied by officials of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store employes, who had called the strike.

FIND MAN'S BODY IN BLAST RUINS; TOLL NOW THREE

Identification of another body found in the wreckage of a two story building at 9258 Stony Island av., destroyed by an explosion and fire Wednesday night, brought the death toll to three last night. Eleven others were injured.

The body of Helmar Heagstedt, 53, of 4547 Lake Park av., was recovered late yesterday, about four hours after Mrs. Mary Klein, 64, whose husband owned the building, died of burns in the South Chicago hospital. Another body, taken from the ruins three hours after the blast, was identified yesterday as Amos Whiteside, 8921 Commercial av., a watchman for the South Chicago Coal and Dock company. Heagstedt was a salesman for Periodical Publishers Service Bureau, Inc., 58 E. Washington st.

Fire Marshal Mullaney said the explosion was caused by an accumulation of gas escaping from a faulty pipeline in the basement of the building. Six of those injured and the two dead men were patrons in a tavern which occupied the first floor. Others injured, and Mrs. Klein, were residents of the building.

WIDOW ALONE IN 30 RM. HOTEL LEAVES $260,000

Mrs. Lila Bohn Ferguson, 83, who purchased the 30 room Riverside hotel at 31 Riverside dr., Riverside, in 1910, then continued to live in the otherwise vacant building with three servants, left an estate of $260,000 when she died last Sunday, it was estimated yesterday when her will was filed in Probate court.

She was the widow of Edward A. Ferguson, an insurance man, and was twice queen of the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, La. Mrs. Ferguson bought the Riverside hotel, once a popular resort, because she liked her apartment when she visited there.

WPB OFFERS PHONES NEEDED BY VETS WHO GO INTO BUSINESS

New telephone installations will be authorized for businesses operated by honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, if they apply within a year after leaving service, the war production board announced yesterday.

To keep the present shortage in the supply of men's winter union suits from becoming worse, the WPB directed knit underwear manufacturers to make at least as many suits during January as were produced in January, 1944.

The board estimated that military and civilian requirements for camera film next year will exceed present production capacity, and it asked the photographic film industry advisory committee for suggestions on increasing production.

Price controls will be removed from mixed chopped fresh vegetables Saturday, the office of price administration announced.

TENANT STRUCK BY HIS LANDLORD TO COLLECT $500

LaClede Bethards, 38, of 6500 Dorchester av., recently asked his landlord, Bert Fisher, 60, of the same address, for a new mattress. The landlord, in response, struck him on the head, tripped him as he walked out the door, and he had to go to the hospital for treatment, Bethards testified before Judge Edward P. Luczak in Grand Crossing police court yesterday.

Fisher, charged with assault and battery, said that Bethards was drunk and refused to leave the room. Policeman William Reilly of Woodlawn station said Bethards was not drunk when he walked into the station and fell unconscious.

Fisher was fined $25 and costs and ordered to pay $500 in hospital bills for Bethards.

The charges had been preferred by John J. Olczyk, 15, of 4723 S. Marshfield av., and Frank Wheeler, 17, of Belmont, Du Page county. James M. Burke, attorney for Plant, called many character witnesses in his client's behalf. One witness, Mrs. Millie Polensky, 5127 S. FIGHT WOMAN'S MILLION CLAIM ON THOMPSON

Hotel Suite Figures in Lawyers' Court Clash.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

A legal battle for one million dollars of the estate of William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago who died last March, began yesterday in the courtroom of Probate Judge John F. O'Connell.

The principals in the fight are the widow, Mrs. Mary Wyse Thompson, who married Thompson in 1901, and Miss Ethabelle Green, trim, red headed, and now 36, who became Thompson's secretary in 1931 and thereafter shared his 13 years of self imposed exile in a Michigan avenue hotel suite.

Refuses to Share It.

Neither of the women was present. Ethabelle is asking the million. Because no will has been offered for probate Mrs. Thompson is the sole heir to the estate, which consisted mainly of 2 millions in currency he had crammed into two safety deposit boxes. She refuses to share her legacy with Miss Green.

Mrs. Thompson is represented by Atty. James W. Breen, short, stout, and 71, former first assistant corporation counsel and a lawyer-politician. Ethabelle is represented by Atty. J. T. Harrington. During yesterday's session the lawyers snarled at each other: Breen from the witness stand, Harrington as questioner.

Harrington, in a petition, had represented Ethabelle to the court as a young girl who looked upon Thompson as a foster father and who forsook all others to cherish and care for the 60 year old man who had just been defeated for reelection as mayor in 1931.

A Reluctant Witness.

Breen was a reluctant witness. He glared at Harrington, a veteran of scores of court encounters. The lawyers hopped from one subject to another and mixed them up in their questions and answers.

Breen was questioned about a visit he made to Thompson's suite in the Blackstone hotel a few days after the death of the ex-mayor. Breen said Mrs. Thompson and her niece were with him. He denied, however, that any of them had taken out any of Ethabelle's clothing on that occasion.

"What authority did you have to take anything out of that room?" demanded Harrington.

Tells Her Authority.

"Mrs. Thompson had the right, as widow and administratrix of the estate," Breen said.

Q.—What did you take? A.—Some watches and some jewelry. Mrs. Thompson started looking for his watches and we found them and some jewelry in a box covered over by a woman's garment.

Q.—Is Mrs. Thompson hiding to avoid being served with a subpena to appear in this court? A.—She is not. She was not home when the deputy sheriffs searched her apartment at 1420 Lake Shore dr.

Q.—Did she ever consult you about obtaining a divorce from Thompson? A.—Yes, about five years ago.

Advised Against It.

Q.—What did you tell her? A.—I advised her she didn't have grounds for a divorce.

Q.—Do you know whether Thompson had any dealings with his wife in the last 20 years? A.—No.

Q.—When did you first know that Bill Thompson was staying away from home, not living with his wife? A.—About in 1915 [the year Thompson first was elected mayor].

Q.—And you told her she didn't have grounds for divorce? A.—Yes, I did.

Believed It His Duty.

Q.—Did you give orders to a Miss Fitzgerald, who had made out income tax returns for Thompson and Miss Green, not to give me any information? A.—That's right.

Q.—Do you think it is your duty, as attorney for the executrix, to block just claims against this estate? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you see Thompson last prior to his death? A.—About a week before he died.

It was then that, for several minutes, the lawyers exploded over questions and answers pertaining to the Thompson-Green suite—whether it had one bedroom or two. It's still unanswered, for the court records, as Breen's answer was—"I don't know what their sleeping arrangements were." Then they took up the subject of Thompson's will—or lack of a will.

The Answer Is No.

Q.—Did you testify in proceedings shortly after Thompson's death that you had drawn a will for him? The answer was no.

Q.—Did you ever tell anyone you drew a will for Thompson? A.—I may have told some newspaper men I had drawn a will for Thompson eight or 10 years ago.

Q.—Did you draw such a will? A.—If I did I don't know that he ever signed it.

Q.—Have you a copy of any such will? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Will you look thru your files and see? A.—I'll be glad to.

Q.—Did Thompson owe you any money? A.—Well, I used my own money to pay a judgment of $93,000 against Thompson in the Mississippi flood relief fund case. I took the money from my own vault. A year and a half later Thompson reimbursed me, with interest.

Q.—Were you present at the marriage of Thompson and Mrs. Thompson in 1901? A.—No, I told you over the telephone that I was because I didn't have a certificate of their marriage at the time and I was afraid you and your gang would go to St. Joseph, Mich., and cut the page with their wedding record out of the court files. A gang framed your case for you. Since then I have such a certificate from the clerk of the Berrien county court.

"It's a poor forgery," Breen said when shown a letter which started "Dear Kiddy" and was signed "Your Dad," and which purported to have been from Thompson to Miss Green.

When court adjourned, Breen was still on the witness stand. The questioning is expected to be resumed this morning.

4 NAVY HEROES TELL HOW THEY FOUGHT IN 2D PHILIPPINE BATTLE

Four naval heroes attached to the aircraft carrier Kalanin Bay during the second battle of the Philippines last Oct. 25 told Union League club members at a luncheon yesterday that pilots flew so low to strafe Jap ships that they had to dodge waterspouts sent up by exploding Jap shells. Repeated runs were made so that the Japs would think there were more planes in the attacking force than there were, Lt. Comdr. William Keighley of Huntington Park, Cal., related. Comdr. Keighley was in charge of the planes aboard the carrier.

Lt. [j. g.] J. T. Cuzzort of 660 N. Dearborn st., a pilot; Lt. [j. g.] W. W. McKittrick, 55 E. Bellevue pl., ordnance officer, and Lt. K. G. Hippe of 508 North st., Peoria, also described some of their experiences during the battle.

The officers said that altho the Kalanin Bay received 16 hits during the battle, it returned to its base and later brought its crew back to this country.

POLICE FORCE NEEDS 300 MEN, SECRETARY SAYS

Because the city police department was able to recruit only 251 men before the civil service eligibility list was exhausted early this year and because leaves for military service were granted to 801 others, the police department is undermanned, James E. McSweeney, the department secretary, said yesterday in his annual report. The force now numbers 6,369, while a normal complement would require the addition of at least 300 more patrolmen, the report stated.

Thru the year 33 men resigned to take war jobs and 144 others retired on pensions. Twenty-two others, incuding six captains and a lieutenant who served as an acting captain, were dismissed for violations of civil service rules.

Two policemen died in the line of duty. They were Samuel Black and Ezra Caldwell, both Negroes, who were killed last Saturday night in a gun battle with a Negro, who also killed his wife.

Driver Helpless in Truck Cab More Than Two Days

His feet frostbitten and his general condition critical from exposure and carbon monoxide poisoning, Dan Filligan, 28, of 735 S. Bailey av., South Haven, Mich., was found last night in the cab of his truck in Gary where he had been helpless for two days and nearly three nights. He was taken to Mercy hospital, Gary. Filligan was overcome by gas outside a truckers' restaurant near the conjunction of routes 12 and 20, Gary, Monday night. He was not found until more than 48 hours later.

MORE 48 HOUR WORK IS HINTED BY AREA WMC

Numerous plants and offices in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin which are now operating on a 40 hour week may be forced to extend their work week to 48 hours, William H. Spencer, regional director of the war man power commission, declared yesterday as he outlined new, stringent plans by which the WMC hopes to solve war plant man power shortages. All area and local WMC offices, Spencer said, have been ordered to review the exemptions granted under the minimum war time work week and to revoke the exemptions if they are not valid.

Another drastic step being taken, Spencer declared, is the reduction of employment ceilings set by the WMC. It also may be necessary to require that in stringent areas women as well as men shall be hired thru the United States employment service, Spencer said, as a means of strengthening the priority referral plan. A problem which must be met by employers, he added, is a reduction in labor turnover. A 25 per cent reduction in turnover would increase the labor supply by one-fifth, he said.

Firms which violate WMC regulations, Spencer said, may face the following "punishments": Loss of employes who will be given statements of availability; denial of man power priorities; and in revised employment ceilings. Spencer spoke before the Chicago Association of Commerce in the Hotel Sherman.

FUND COLLECTOR INDICTED IN VOTE PROBE BY HOUSE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—The 1944 Presidential campaign echoed today in a grand jury indictment and renewed testimony before a house investigating committee.

A District of Columbia grand jury indicted Joseph P. Kamp of New York on charges of failing to provide the house campaign expenditures committee with records of the Constitutional Educational League, Inc.

Wouldn't Disclose Names.

Kamp's indictment, charging him specifically with failing to produce records of contributions of $100 or more, resulted from his appearance before the house committee last Sept. 20. Acting chairman of the league, he contended the organization is non-political.

When he appeared before the house group, Kamp said the league was fighting "to prevent Sidney Hillman, the CIO, and the Communist party from taking over the country" and its efforts were not partisan. The committee cited him for contempt.

O'Connor Testifies.

Today's testimony concerned the American Democratic National committee and came from J. J. O'Connor, former New York representative. As chairman of the anti-New Deal organization's executive committee he was summoned to fill in financial details of the campaign conducted by the organization in 33 states.

Chairman Anderson [D., N. M.] said O'Connor's original accounting was not in sufficient detail to meet requirements of the corrupt practices act.

"I'll match this accounting with anything you get from the Democratic National committee or the Republican National committee," O'Connor said as he read from a financial report of the organization.

Much of today's questioning concerned fees paid investigators and fund solicitors who worked for the committee.

5C TICKET WINS $80 UNPAID, SO SELLER IS FINED

Mrs. Callie Bassett, 50, of 2975 State st., Negro, was fined $100 yesterday by Judge Jay Schiller in South State Street court when she admitted issuing a 5 cent policy ticket to Mrs. Savanah Franklin of 2974 Wabash av., also a Negro. Mrs. Franklin had complained that the ticket, which won $80, had not been turned in by the collector, and she hadn't received her money. Judge Schiller set Jan. 9 to hear a motion to vacate the fine.

Makes Yule Tree

Mrs. E. J. Daly decorating Christmas tree she spent a year in fabricating. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Finding just the right Christmas tree is no problem for Mrs. E. J. Daly of 8635 S. Wood st. She made her own tree this year, using paper, wire, paste, and the trunk of a last year's tree. The tree, 6½ feet tall, has 128 branches, from 4 to 24 inches long. The branches are made of two pieces of paper, one silver, the other green, pasted on wire and attached to the trunk of the tree. It took her a year, using just her spare time, but Mrs. Daly thinks the tree is worth her trouble.

NAME LEADERS FOR POLIO FUND DRIVE JAN. 15-30

Arthur H. Schneider, general sales manager of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, and James J. Doody, treasurer of the Catholic Order of Foresters, will manage a drive for funds from Jan. 15 to Jan. 30 by the Cook county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, it was announced yesterday.

They were in charge of the drive last year and were reappointed by A. A. Sprague and Britton I. Budd, co-chairman of the county chapter.

"Generous public contributions are imperative in the approaching drive," Schneider said, "because this year the country suffered its second worst polio scourge in history and we must be on guard against the constant danger of a recurring epidemic. Cook county's share of the foundation's research expenses must be met."

C. H. HARRISON QUITS REVENUE OFFICE DEC. 31

Veteran Public Official to Be 85 in April.

The long public career of Carter H. Harrison which paralleled that of his father, approached its end yesterday when he announced his resignation as collector of internal revenue as of Dec. 31. He will be 85 years old next April 23.

Carter H. Harrison.

"After the next few days I won't be getting up at 6 a. m. to ride an early trolley, having to stand on the rear platform and catch colds," he said. "At my age I would like to be free to go to a warmer climate."

He displayed a letter from President Roosevelt accepting his resignation. It reads in part:

"Your record of earnest and active work and self-sacrificing efficiency in this position over the past 11 years adds further distinction to your long career of high minded public service to the people of Chicago, the state of Illinois, and the nation."

Elected Mayor Five Times.

Five times elected mayor of Chicago [as was his father], Harrison said he sought to resign last April. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau talked him into remaining on the job until the end of the year. In political circles it was assumed this was done to provide a berth for a Democrat who might lose in the Nov. 7 election.

Nigel Campbell, deputy collector, may be in line for the post. He visited Mayor Kelly a week ago and is a brother of Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis, who directed the Democratic downstate campaign and is a friend of Sen. Lucas. The northern Illinois collectorship pays $7,500 a year to start. Political leaders said no choice has been made.

Harrison was born at Harrison and Clark streets, in a house built by his father in 1858. He was educated in Germany and in what is now Loyola university, finally receiving his law degree at Yale university. After a few years in the real estate business with a brother, they operated the old Chicago Times purchased by their father. This venture lasted five years.

Favored Subway System.

Harrison the younger was elected mayor in 1897. He was reelected for two year terms in 1899, 1901, and 1903. In 1911 he again was elected for a four year term. He made strenuous efforts to improve the city's transportation, and favored a subway system with universal transfers. In 1915 he was defeated in the Democratic mayoralty primary by Robert M. Sweitzer.

With his wife, Edith, whom he married in 1887, he lives at 2100 Lincoln Park West.

Ruth Simms' Condition Reported 'Comfortable'

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, a Republican leader from Albuquerque, N. M., convalescing after an operation in Billings hospital, was reported as "comfortable" yesterday by hospital attendants. The operation for acute pancreatitis was performed Dec. 4. Mrs. Simms is publisher of two newspapers in Rockford.

Plans Divorce

MERLE OBERON.

Hollywood, Dec. 20 (AP).—Screen Actress Merle Oberon announced today that her estrangement from Alexander Korda, head of MGM film production in England, has become final and that she will bring suit for divorce.

"Efforts for the last two years to work out separate lives and careers have failed," she said. "The parting is amicable."

Miss Oberon came here from England in 1935 and went abroad again in 1942, when she entertained United States troops in Ireland. Korda went to England in the latter year and had returned here only for brief business trips.

WOMAN FOUND BADLY FROZEN ON PARK BENCH

A woman identified as Mrs. Martha K. Alexander, about 45, of 759 Congress st., was found unconscious and in a serious condition on a bench in Lincoln park near Diversey pkwy. yesterday. Two notes were found in her purse and Dr. George N. Beecher, who attended her in Columbus hospital, said that she might have been on the bench all night. Her husband, Andrew, identified her at the hospital.

One of the notes read: "To whom it may concern: I am in ill health and am going to take my life. May God have mercy on my soul." The second was addressed to a sister, Mrs. Jendrin Galbraith of 1336 Early av., and said there was sufficient money sewn in her clothing to defray funeral expenses. Pinned to an undergarment was $62 and in her handbag were $9.60 and war stamps worth $5.

Dr. Beecher said he was unable to determine whether she had taken any drugs. The woman's hands and feet were frozen and other parts of her body were frostbitten. She remained unconscious for hours.

2 YANKS, HURT IN WRECK, ASK $200,000 EACH

Two personal injury suits for $200,000 each were filed in federal court yesterday against the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad by two soldiers who alleged they were severely injured in a wreck last Sept. 14 near Terre Haute, Ind., in which 26 persons were killed and 13 injured. The suits were brought by Sgt. Maywood Carpenter, 28, of Summerfield, O., and Sgt. Earl Carruthers, 26, of Gordon, Wis. The two, passengers on the road's Dixie Flyer, which crashed head-on into an express mail train, claim irreparable injuries to their backs and spines.

SYNOPSIS: John Ranger and three cattlemen go in search of rustlers who shot Rod Spillman. In an attempt to get away, one rustler is killed and a stranger, Cape Sloan, is held. Uhlmann and Shoite want to hang Sloan, believing he is one of Scarface's bandits. Sloan escapes. Singlehanded, he rescues Sandra and Nelson Ranger from the Lopez raiders and wins the friendship of their father. At the Ranger ranch the Negro cook recognizes Sloan as Mr. Webb, escaped prisoner. Noting Sloan's reaction to Ranger's story of Jug Packard—how he acquired the Johnny B mine and sent young Webb to prison for killing Giles Lemmon—Sandra gets him to admit he is Bob Webb. From Stan Fraser, Sloan learns the petition for Webb's pardon was blocked by Packard, who fraudulently secured the Webb share in the Johnny B mine and framed young Webb. Together they journey to Tucson to find Chandler Newman, former bookkeeper at the mine. Sandra and John Ranger persuade Newman to talk. Sloan is recognized. Trapped in the hotel, Fraser and Sloan seek refuge and find themselves in Sandra's room. John Ranger hides them. When Packard locates them they force him to direct his men to Ranger's room while they run for the two saddled horses awaiting them. One horse is killed. One of Uhlmann's men is shot. McMurdo provides a mount and tells them that String Crews heard Uhlmann, while drunk, admit Packard paid him $500 to do away with Webb's father. Crews confirms this. Stan learns a stage robbery has been attributed to Webb, also the killing of Uhlmann's man in Tucson, and a reward is offered for his capture, dead or alive. The Rangers, with Newman, visit the governor. Uhlmann demands $1,500 from Packard to do away with Webb. Mary Gilcrest, missing witness in the killing of Giles Lemmon, is Uhlmann's wife. On her way to see Mrs. Uhlmann, Sandra meets Fraser, but refuses to reveal her destination.

INSTALMENT XXXIV.

A SHOT.

Sandra thought quickly. "I came to have a talk with you," she replied.

"Then why didn't you ride by the road?" Uhlmann wanted to know.

She had an answer for that. "I thought perhaps you would rather I weren't seen going to your place, on account of the trouble at Tucson."

"What do you want with me?"

"I want to ask you please to let Bob Webb alone. He has never harmed you, Mr. Uhlmann. Don't you think you have hurt him enough already?"

"How have I ever hurt him?" he growled.

"You testified at his trial that he killed Giles Lemmon, and you know that wasn't true," she said.

"That so?" he jeered. "Who did?"

"Never mind that now. Why do you hate Bob so? Let the officers get him if they can. It's not your business."

"I want the reward."

"I shouldn't think you would want blood money," she said contemptuously.

"It will buy just as much. And I won't be satisfied till that fellow is rubbed out or sent back."

"For seven or eight years he has been in that terrible place to serve a sentence for something he did not do, Mr. Uhlmann, I'm only a girl, but I know you can't do a deliberate wrong to anybody without destroying yourself."

"Don't try to feed me pap," he broke out violently. "I know what I'm about, and I aim to keep right on doing it."

He pushed his horse closer, so that his seamed leathery face was close to hers. "You do some listening, Miss High-and-Mighty. The only reason you speak to me is because you are crazy about this Webb and are scared of what I'll do to him. Tell him for me I'll get him. It's gonna be him or me one."

"You've seen me now," he jeered. "And fixed up everything nice. There's nothing to keep you from headin' for home now."

"Let go that rein," Sandra ordered.

"You didn't come to see me at all," he charged, "but to meet yore fancy Dan."

"Turn loose my horse," she warned, her eyes bright with anger. "You know where he's roostin' up in these hills, and by cripes! you're gonna take me to him."

She swung her quirt, and the lash cut across the fellow's cheek. Startled by the unexpected pain, his hand dropped from the rein. Sandra was away like a frightened rabbit, her body low over the neck of her mount, Stung to fury, the man fired at her and missed. Some saving sense in him stopped the second shot. He lowered the rifle and put his horse to a gallop in pursuit. Before he had gone 30 yards he knew his lumbering sorrel could not catch her light wellbred racer.

Fraser found Bob lying on his back gazing up at the thin cloud skeins drifting across the sky.

"I'll bet you are thinking about my girl," Fraser challenged with a chuckle.

"Didn't know you had one," Bob responded cautiously.

"You didn't know I had a girl!" Fraser exclaimed with a show of indignation. "Shows how much you don't use yore eyes. Why, I just been out on the bluff having a nice talk with her."

Webb slanted incredulous but inquiring eyes at him. "You old roue, and I've been siding you all this time without suspecting how depraved you are."

"Nothing of the kind. I've got the most honorable intentions. I told her soon as these sheriffs quit wanting me I would be right there at the Circle-JR looking for her."

The prostrate man had not moved a muscle. "So you met Miss Ranger," he said.

"You bet I did. On one of the cow trails that run along the prong."

"Not alone?"

"Why not, there were two of us there—Miss Sandra and me."

"What for?"

Fraser abandoned his badinage. "I don't rightly know why, boy. When I hinted it might be to find you, she put me in my place quick. There was something else in her mind."

"What could it be? Nobody lives up here."

The older man scratched his head. "She said something about going to see a neighbor."

"That doesn't make sense."

"I couldn't get it. Say, she told me something I didn't know. She has found out who married Mary Gilcrest and where she lives."

"It must have been that ad Ranger put in the papers. I suppose the woman answered it."

"I dunno about that. Give you three guesses as to who the woman married: She is Miss. Hans Uhlmann."

Bob stared at him. "You sure?"

"That's what Miss Sandra told me."

"Makes it fine for me, doesn't it? You can't make a wife give evidence against her husband. I reckon they won't allow her to go on the stand."

His friend agreed. "The girl must have heard plenty of Packard wouldn't have thought it necessary for her to be hogtied by marrying Uhlmann."

"By now she is good and tired of that hulking rhinoceros probably. If she knows anything and will talk there must be some way of using her. You better get you a good lawyer."

"I don't know any that lives on this street," Bob answered.

"Ranger will see one for you. I still think country air is more suitable for yore puny corporosity."

Bob did not answer that. The consideration of another problem was occupying his mind. What was Sandra doing on this bare ridge 10 miles from home? Had she come on the slight chance of meeting Fraser or him to tell them the news about Mary Gilcrest? It did not seem reasonable. She had no way of knowing that they were within 50 miles of the Circle-JR.

RAILWAY EXPRESS REJECTS PACKAGES FOR YULE DELIVERY

The Railway Express company yesterday had discontinued acceptance of packages for delivery before Christmas. A. A. Rullo, chief assistant to the terminal service superintendent of the company, said the action was necessitated by the man power shortage and a record volume of business. He pointed out that Chicago, the hub of 29 railroads, is the largest transfer city in the country, which imposes an additional burden upon the company's facilities. Much of the overflow has been diverted to the postoffice, Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen said. Kruetgen said that by working all day Sunday, the postoffice hopes to deliver all of its Christmas parcels by Christmas.

Pays Son $500 of $1,900 to Avert 1,900 Days in Jail

Joseph Olejnik, 52, of 1709 N. Talman av., paid a first instalment of $500 yesterday on the $1,900 he was ordered to pay to his son, Edward, a sailor. The money disappeared from the son's safety deposit box, and Judge N. J. Bonelli in Racine avenue court ordered Olejnik to "repay the $1,900 or serve 1,900 days in jail." Judge Bonelli yesterday directed that the first instalment be given to Olejnik's wife, Anna.

TURKEY RAISER ACCUSED BY U.S. OF DEFYING WFA

Edward C. Sass of rural route 1, Hinsdale, owner of the Shady Valley Turkey farm, was named in a criminal information filed in federal District court yesterday by United States Atty. Woll, charging him with violating regulations of the war food administration. The information alleged that Sass sold 400 turkeys to persons unauthorized to buy them and thru punch board sales. The WFA order prohibits sale of turkeys by raisers to any but authorized processors in so-called turkey areas in which the government has first call upon all birds raised. The action is the first of its type filed in this area, Woll said.

THE MEAT SITUATION

DECEMBER, 1944

The meat supply for civilians has improved slightly this month; but, even so, you may not always be able to get the quantity, quality, kind and cut you desire.

The reason is: tremendous quantities are going, sometimes on short notice, to feed our G.I. Joes; our G.I. Janes and our fighting allies.

Nobody would change that, and military demands for meat are expected to continue heavy.

According to 1944 estimates based on U. S. Department of Agriculture figures, livestock producers and meat packers will have provided the all-

Louise Warner Herdic Bride of Ensign in West

BY JUDITH CASS.

SURPRISING news is contained in the announcement Mr. and Mrs. John Eliot Warner of E. Walton pl. are making of the marriage last Saturday in San Francisco of their niece, Miss Louise Warner Herdic, to Ensign James Edward Jones Jr. of the naval reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones of New York. The ceremony took place in the First Presbyterian church, and the only member of the families present was the bride's cousin, Lt. Morris Eddy, who gave her in marriage.

The bride, daughter of John Franklin Herdic and the late Mrs. Herdic, has lived with the Warners for many years. She attended the North Shore Country Day school, Mount Vernon seminary, and Pine Manor and was introduced to society last year by the Warners and another aunt, Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, mother of Lt. Eddy, and Mr. Wheeler.

Ensign Jones attended Exeter academy and Princeton university, at which he was a roommate of Jamie Fentress, husband of the Warners' daughter, Barbara. Ensign Jones and his bride met in Chicago shortly before the Fentress-Warner wedding, while Ensign Jones was stationed at Tower hall. Mrs. Jones will remain with her husband while he is in this country and then will return to live with the Warners. Mr. and Mrs. Fentress have been living in Richland, Wash., since November.

Youngsters Pay for Parents' Mistakes—in Juvenile Court

BY NORMA LEE BROWNING.

He was the kind of a boy most people would call precious. He kept flapping his chubby hand at a piece of hair that stood straight out in front like a skeezix.

He was freshly scrubbed and he wore a loose fitting coat and corduroy trousers.

. . . Mostly he kept his eyes on that big man sitting in the swivel chair in front of him. [TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

He perched his elbow on the railing in front of him and eyed the big man on the bench with childish curiosity.

He was surrounded by a group of long faced grown-ups, some he knew, some he never saw before—his teacher, a postal clerk, a minister, a school principal, a copper, his mother and dad.

Sometimes when the talking got loud he turned and looked from one to the other, curiously. But mostly he kept his eyes on that big man sitting in the big swivel chair in front of him. The big man seemed to be studying some sheets of paper somebody had handed him.

"So you like to set fires to garbage heaps?" the big man asked.

The boy puckered his face and turned to look at the grown-ups behind him, as if expecting them to answer for him. When they didn't, he turned back to the big man.

Still the boy didn't answer.

"Well, sonny," said the big man. "What do you have to say for yourself? . . . What's the matter, can't you talk?"

The big man, who was judge of the Juvenile court, was nettled. He shifted his own position, cleared his throat, and, making a brave effort to ignore those young, quizzical eyes, he began to query the grownups.

A postal clerk gave the judge a large brown envelope filled with letters the boy had taken from neighborhood mailboxes.

A school teacher told the judge that the boy was often truant from school.

A school principal said an older brother was always being called out of class to come home and take care of the younger boy. She said the older brother was "a fine young man of excellent character in spite of his home surroundings."

"Where are the boy's parents?" asked the judge, looking from one to the other.

They hung their heads and said they couldn't cope with the boy.

The judge studied the written report for a moment and asked:

"Are you two living together now?"

"I'm home every night," said the man.

"Yeah, for meals only," spoke up his wife.

At this point the boy turned to look at his mother and dad. He blinked and winced. The judge ordered the bailiff to take him from the courtroom, then continued:

"What about this other woman? You still going out with her?"

"O, no, your honor. She's in Arkansas now."

"No."

"You did so," said the wife.

"Do you hear from her?" asked the judge.

"No, sir."

The judge took the letter and read part of it aloud:

"My own darling. . . . I miss you so much. . . ."

The boy with the stubborn skeezix is too young even to know the meaning of such words as "juvenile" and "delinquency." He might be old enough to know it's wrong to rifle mail boxes and set fire to garbage heaps, but by what and whose standards does he know right from wrong?

His parents have been separated for a long time. When they're not separated their home is nothing more than a domestic battleground.

The boy knows his dad doesn't sleep at home anymore. He knows his mom goes out, too, at night and sometimes doesn't come home until the next day.

Of course he wouldn't know what the judge means by talking about "extramarital relations."

And, since he is so young, maybe he won't even know that the great big house they are taking him to is the Juvenile Detention home.

In the last year [Oct. 1, 1943, thru Sept. 30, 1944] the police department filed 1,753 delinquent petitions against juvenile boys. In addition, the boy's department received 910 complaints for investigation, resulting in 152 being brought into court on delinquent charges.

Out of 1,259 complaints received

Concert Group Asked to Leave Opera Building

Concert managers are being notified by the management of the Civic Opera house that they must seek quarters elsewhere next season, which is the equivalent of an exodus to Orchestra hall, the only other available concert hall of suitable size, now that the Auditorium is out of commercial competition. It is understood that the 20 Wacker Drive Building corporation intends to invade concert management on its own account, under the direction of James C. Thompson, manager of the building corporation, and Herbert Carlin, manager of the theater.

This decision dispossesses several managements, notably that of Allied Arts, under the direction of Edgar Goldsmith and Warren Thompson. Speaking for the firm, Mr. Thompson stated yesterday that he and his partner regret leaving the opera house, which will necessitate a change in the History and Enjoyment of Music series, for the last 10 years a popular subscription series of eight concerts at prices made possible by the 3,600 capacity of the opera house. Mr. Thompson said it might be necessary to arrange two series of six concerts each to accommodate the 2,500 capacity of Orchestra hall.

Under the new management, the opera house probably will deal directly with the ballet troupes, formerly booked by Allied Arts, because no suitable theater is now available except the big house on Wacker dr. Earlier this season the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo played the Civic Opera house to a total gross of $79,000, of which the theater's share was $13,400, while the later Ballet Theater engagement grossed $66,000, of which $11,200 went for rental. During the season of 1943-'44, Allied Arts paid a total of $31,000 in rent to the Civic Opera house.

Filmy Dresses Are Ready for Holiday Parties

BY REA SEEGER.

Angelic dance dresses, copied from the angels in filmy dresses fastened high on the Christmas tree, are snowflake white, have swirling wide skirts, tiny fitted bodices, and picture book perfect necklines. They're the most romantic dresses in town, the real honest-to-goodness holiday dresses that appear only once a year. Most of them are made of airy nets and laces, some swish provocatively over taffeta under slips or petticoats, some have holly berry red contrast, achieved with scarlet sequins, and others shimmer with the glint of thousands of rhinestones or silver beads.

The all whites lead the preference lists of the stag line. Those with double ruching in bow knots and band trim appeal to the more feminine types of girls, while the models festooned with a dozen clusters of white ostrich feathers are truly glamorous. The all-over lace contrasts make yokes, peplums, and flounces on already wide net skirts and fashion the tiny puffed sleeves. Daringly low off-the-shoulder necklines are also accented with ruchings of net or lace. All of them feature exceedingly wide skirts that touch the floor, the very essence of all the dream dance dresses of debs and subdebs.

If the all-white models are a bit too ethereal, try the more brilliant shades of scarlet or emerald green and the seductive all blacks, made in confections of nets and lace, and matching black swishy taffeta skirts, bows, and other accent trim. Black velvet, made with wide dancing skirts, is another material used with picturesque effect in these super-dance dresses.

Stage Note

John Van Druten will be in town between trains today, on his way from New York to California. He will visit with the company of his Selwyn hit, "The Voice of the Turtle," and no doubt will tell about the busy month he spent on Broadway, rehearsing Betty Field to succeed Margaret Sullavan in the original "Turtle" troupe and getting Nancy Marquand ready to replace Frances Heflin in his newer success, "I Remember Mama." Mr. Van Druten plans to take a long rest on his ranch, but the theater hopes he soon will be reaching for a pencil, or is it a typewriter?

Tailored Lines Given to Paris Evening Wear

BY ANNE BRUYERE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Lucile Manguin showed strictly man tailored jackets on her evening ensembles for women, presented today.

These jackets come in breitschwanz, velvet, and taffeta. They are worn over floor length circular skirted net, tulle, and lame dresses, the foot wide hems of which are bordered with the same material as the coats. One unusual model consists of black broadcloth "tails" shown with a widely plaited silk skirt with a short train.

This house also shows contrasting colors and fabrics in afternoon dresses. "Five o'clock tea" is a black woolen model with drapery of gray breitschwanz at the hips. The waist is severely tailored and the skirt is gathered beneath the drapery and flared. Another dressy ensemble, called "Trocadero," consists of a shirtmaker blouse of night blue sequins worn over a dark gray skirt of silk jersey.

Green, black, and white stripes in grege wool form the sleeves, collar, and four stitched-on pockets of a black suit worn with a vest of green chamois and a square shouldered cape of white wool. Red velvet trims the collar of a navy blue suit with pin point stripes of white and yellow.

Max Fur shop also features combinations of fur and fabrics. Huge lynx cuffs reaching to the elbows are shown on a sharply wing shouldered blue woolen coat with a 6-inch side matching blue belt and square buttons of antelope. The standup collar is formed of a 2-inch high band. The skirt is extremely flared.

A brown worsted coat has two rows of shining buttons placed from bust to hem, also beaver sleeves and a short attached bolero. Gray breitschwanz forms the vest-shaped top of another winter coat of black wool. A 2 foot square panther muff lined with red velvet is worn with an astrakhan redingote.

Six-inch squares of white ermine are stitched in parallel horizontal rows, alternating with black velvet, on the empire skirt of a breitschwanz evening wrap. Russian sables cleverly worked in with camouflaged velvet bands giving the impression of floor length hooded capes also are shown by this house for evening wear. One is fashioned of black breitschwanz with a white ermine cowl. The star model is of chinchilla, with the pelts worked horizontally on the cape and vertically on the removable hood, which also may be worn as a double muff.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

From Across the Sea.

One pretty white collar girl in Chicago with a more than average interest in doing her part to win the war is Kathleen Shepard, 21, a native of London who is an American citizen, altho she has been in the United States only since last October. She derives her American citizenship from her father, a trade magazine publisher, originally from Massachusetts, now living eight miles out of London.

Kay is secretary to the chief engineer of the Oscar W. Hedstrom corporation, which is engaged in war production. She speaks glowingly of her job, which she likes immensely, and shows an enthusiasm for Chicago that is refreshing and sincere. "I have found the city and its people, without exception, friendly, hospitable, and kind to me since my arrival," she says appreciatively.

Kay is well schooled in the meaning of war. He home in England was damaged twice, once by a land mine and again by a buzz bomb. She served as a Red Cross nurse from 1939 to 1942 and later was an air raid warden. She came to America to be near her fiance, an air force flyer, medically discharged, who is working in Chicago. Her brother, a member of the royal air force, is on active duty in Europe.

The attractive British girl had a new and exciting experience in her consistently eventful life when she took part in a television broadcast the other day, "much more fun than sweeping up after a buzz bomb," she remarks.

Quiet Room.

Malva Andre made a wonderful suggestion recently—a chapel for employed persons to find spiritual restoration during the day. This has long seemed to me a vital need of those working amid confusion, for busy days in offices, factories, and stores squeeze the soul unless there is an occasional withdrawal and a chance for quiet and lifting of one's inner self.

A quiet room would bolster the morale of many a worker nursing the heartache of war and would be so welcome to those who long for a chance to retire, however briefly, from the daily confusion.

Youngsters Pay for Parents' Mistakes—In Juvenile Court

According to Judge Frank Bicek, who is completing his 12th consecutive year of assignment to the Juvenile court in Chicago, these figures indicate a slight decrease in juvenile delinquency over the previous year.

At least 70 per cent of the juvenile delinquency cases that come into court involve children from broken homes, he said. To any spectator in Juvenile court this would seem a conservative estimate.

This writer sat thru scores of hearings on two consecutive days and heard only one case in which the mother and father of a delinquent boy were still married to each other, and apparently, happily so.

"What do you do when you skip school?" asked the judge.

"What do you do at night when you're not home?"

"Ride the el."

"Where do you sleep?"

"On the el."

"You mean you sleep all night on the el?"

"No, sir. The conductor wakes me up sometimes and makes me get off."

"Then what do you do?"

"Get on another one."

"Don't you ever get tired riding the el?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where's this boy's mother?"

"Here, your honor."

"Is his father here?"

"No, your honor."

"Where is his father?"

"I'm sure I don't know, your honor. Last I heard, he was in Georgia. That was three years ago."

Case No. 2. Delinquent girl. She had had an illegitimate baby. The girl was brought into court from the juvenile detention home where she was being held. She was insolent and defiant. Her father was in court. He said:

"I'm sorry, your honor. I've reared this girl since she was a baby, without a mother. I've done the best I know how."

The girl's mother was in court. She should have been in a hospital. The child she was carrying was due any minute. She said she had been divorced twice before and that she had lived with her third husband some time before marrying him. The third husband said he was "very sorry" for "carrying on" with his stepdaughter, especially after he learned his wife was "in this condition."

Case No. 4. Delinquent girl. Ran away from home.

This girl, poised, refined, and intelligent looking, was picked up as a delinquent at the instigation of her father, who disapproved of her recent association of her half-sister, a "tavern trouper."

The record showed the girl's parents were divorced when she was a baby, that the mother had been declared morally unfit to receive custody of the three children, and that she still remained in that category.

The father reared the children alone.

"I did all the washing, ironing, cooking, and went to work besides," he told the judge. "Janie here thinks I'm too strict on her. But it's been a mighty hard job being both mother and dad to my girls, and I don't want them to start going wrong now. I don't want to force her to come back to me if she doesn't want to, but please, your honor, make her give up that restaurant job and the bad company she's keeping."

The girl's appearance and behavior were proof of her father's success in child-rearing. However, she was at the crucial age of adolescence, that period at which girls most need the guidance of a mother.

Only a minimum amount of intelligence is required to observe that most of the evidence against the "juvenile delinquent" is actually evidence against the adult instead.

A gawky, pimply-faced lad was hailed into Juvenile court for his third offense. This time he had stolen a car.

His mother was there, dazed and frightened, and holding a new baby in her arms. Beside her was her husband, the gawky boy's stepfather.

The boy had been shifted around, since his parents' divorce several years ago, to his father in Des Moines, his grandmother in Michigan, and an aunt on a farm in Indiana.

His voice was shaky when he pleaded:

"I promise you I won't do it again if you'll let me go back to my dad. I promise. I'm gonna join the navy as soon as I'm 17. Please let me go back to my dad."

My own thoughts flashed back to a recent scene in a divorce court. Two women were physically battling over a 7 year old boy who was wild with terror.

"You can't have Jackie. You can't have him," cried the mother as she frantically pulled the boy's arm.

"Get away from here," cried the stepmother, as she flung her purse at the other woman and enveloped the panic-stricken child in her plaid topcoat.

Jackie sobbed and screamed, "I want my daddy. I want my daddy."

Jackie's daddy, an army captain, was at the moment sulking in one corner of the courtroom because he had been ordered to jail for "kidnaping" his boy from his mother.

The voice of the juvenile judge punctured the reverie. He was saying:

"Well, young man, I'm sorry. You've been given two chances before. The court sentences you to St. Charles."

As the bailiff took the pimply-faced boy in custody, I could not help thinking:

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 20.—Paramount will have its own answer to Frank Fay's "Harvey" in the late Stephen Vincent Benet's "O'Halloran's Luck"—story of an Irish boy with his own little leprechaun. The New Yorker is losing one of its best writers, John McNaughty, who arrives Christmas day to start work on it. . . . It's Fritz Lang who's trying to buy rights to "Yankee from Olympus" by Catherine Drinker Bowen. It's the story of Oliver Wendell Holmes. . . . David Lewis has got around to Signe Hasso, which has her friends worried. . . . Even Bette Davis' studio thinks she's wed to Corp. Riley, but she won't answer its telegrams now. . . . Guess it won't be long before Capt. Gene Markey and Myrna Loy say their "I do's." At a recent party with old friends in Washington, which went on till dawn, Gene said, "This will be about the end of my bachelor parties." . . . John Payne overheard at a broadcast the other day about his coming marriage to Gloria De Haven: "Gosh, I hope this one takes, so I won't have to have a third."

Boxing Gloves for Eddie's Next.

Words of Wisdom for Jinx.

Jinx Falkenburg called to say she had seen Maj. Tex McCrary in Cairo. He's taken 16 parachute jumps, but they haven't jumped into matrimony. Before coming west she had tea with Bernard Baruch in New York and said to him, "On my return it just made me sick to hear everybody complaining about lack of butter, cigarets, and meat." Bernard replied, "Don't resent what others think. Don't hold it against them. If you hadn't gone over you wouldn't know the true situation either, would you?" Then added, "But don't forget anything you saw in China and Burma. Let that experience live with you always. You're young, and it's thru people like you, who know the facts, that we can hope for a better world."

What's This? I Don't Get It.

I'm told Lupe Velez had a direct wire from her bedside table to the Beverly Hills police station. What was she afraid of? It was in Lupe's house that Ben Bernie suffered his fatal heart attack. . . . Jumping the gun on announcement of Paulette Goddard's coming blessed event cost Paulette around $50,000. She hoped to keep it a secret for three months, during which time she would have been on salary at $5,000 a week while waiting for Bob Hope to come back to work. You figure what three months' pay would have run up to. . . . Clark Gable did a honey of a recording for March of Dimes. Frankie Boy [Sinatra] made five. . . . "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" will make yours the same way. You'll ache from laughing. I haven't laughed so hard since last time I saw Bea Lillie. When Diana Lynn and Gail Russell appear in their new bunny-hug dolmans you'll double up. I'm not surprised Paramount's doing a sequel. Those characters go right on, just as Authors Skinner and Kimbrough are doing, and instead of mellowing with age like old wine they're more spry than colts—especially Emily. So's the picture. . . . Dick Powell tells how to remain successfully married: "It's the same as tho you worked for the telephone company in Kokomo, Ind. Don't take your business home. It also helps if you love your wife." Is that the reason he's stayed happily married twice?

Choral Group Plans Programs on Three Nights of Week-End

The North Shore Choral society has a busy week-end in view, with its presentation of the "Messiah" tomorrow night in the Wilmette church, a visit Saturday night to the Presbyterian Old People's home, and a carol sing Christmas Eve in the Great Lakes Naval hospital. If the weather permits, the group will make the Saturday night trip by sleigh. After entertaining residents there with carols, they will tour the village of Winnetka, winding up at the Herbert Siecks for an oyster stew and more informal singing.

Miss Martha Vesey will sing the soprano roles for the "Messiah" and Kenneth Hendriksen, the tenor solos. Miss Louise Yates and Harold Blumberg will have the alto and bass roles, respectively.

Goren on Bridge

Both sides vulnerable, South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
2 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

When partner has responded to your opening bid with one no trump, you must first decide whether to bid again, and having done so, your next problem is what to bid.

When I saw today's hand played, South quite properly decided that his hand was not well adapted to no trump play. He elected, therefore, to show his five card suit by bidding two spades. Naturally, North could not take any further action and there the hand was played for a loss of 200 points.

It will be noted that at diamonds, the North and South pair could have taken eight tricks without any difficulty. Is this hind sight analysis? By all means no. South was guilty of an outstanding error in bidding two spades. For the same price of admission, he could have given himself two shows. His proper rebid was two diamonds. If partner prefers diamonds, naturally his choice would be fortunate. If partner prefers spades, he would be at perfect liberty to return to that contract without increasing the level. The bid of two diamonds might gain, but it could not possibly lose.

So many players have it firmly fixed in their minds that a five card suit, particularly a major suit, must always be rebid. This is a grave and frequent error. The holding of a five card suit gives you the option to rebid it if developments make it advisable. But by no means are you under a definite obligation to show that your suit is five cards long. It is much more important to search around for a comfortable place to play the hand, and that comfortable place will very frequently be in a suit in which you hold but four cards, if your partner can support it.

South assigned as his reason for not bidding two diamonds that he did not wish to force his partner to bid again, and he feared that the showing of a new suit would make it obligatory for North to speak once more.

This is a very common misconception of the forcing principle. Please take one minute's time out to get this straight: The showing of a new suit forces only one player at the table—and that player is the one who opened the bidding. The other three are not subject to that obligation.

TOMORROW'S PROBLEM.

You are South, holding the following hand:

♠ 8 6 2 ♥ A 10 8 7 4 2 ♦ Q 5 ♣ 6 2

The bidding has proceeded as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 club	1 spade	?

What do you bid?

Big Sisters' Junior Aides to Give Party for Orphans

Baby garments and toys will be distributed by the Junior Aides of the Big Sisters organization to the 200 tots of St. Vincent's orphanage at a party to be given Saturday afternoon by the Junior Aides. The junior group has set up a Christmas tree which has been decorated with ornaments provided by public school children and there will be three clowns to entertain with music and tricks. The garments, on which friends have been working for the past several months, will be supplemented with a cash gift from the young Aides. Bette Mae Nash and Joan Nelson are chairman and co-chairman of the Aides, and Big Sisters working with them in an advisory capacity are Mrs. Leo P. Finn, Mrs. Richard Nash, and Mrs. Oscar J. Nelson.

Your Christmas salad needn't be red and green just because these are the colors of Christmas. But if you like red and green Christmas salads, there are plenty of naturally red and green fruits and vegetables from which to make a selection.

Sliced hothouse tomatoes on watercress, marinated beet slices on chopped spinach, jellied cranberry molds on watercress, lettuce, or other greens, individual tomato aspic rings on the grassiest of greens, halves of avocado with cranberry fruit salad dressing; these are a few ideas for holiday greens and reds.

An old favorite holiday salad is the cinnamon apple or pear on watercress. Old fashioned red cinnamon candies are used to tint and flavor the sirup in which the apples or pears are cooked. These candies are hard to find nowadays, so many cooks use crushed mints for flavoring and add a few drops of red food coloring to the sirup.

If you make cinnamon pears from canned pears you needn't cook the pears further in sirup. Just color and flavor the sirup from the can, pour it over the pear halves, and chill overnight or until the pears take on the red hue.

Christmas bell salads are made by stuffing tinted pear halves with cream cheese and nuts. Put two red pear halves together with enough cream cheese mixture to hold them, and if desired cut a thin slice from the bottom of the combination so that the Christmas bell will stand up on its watercress bed. A strip of green pepper may be placed in the stem end of each pear salad.

Holly wreath salads are made with canned pineapple—a rare and point-high fruit these days. For each salad a slice of pineapple is spread with cream cheese, then covered rather thickly with watercress leaves. Halves of maraschino cherries or cranberries make the holly berries. A bed of lettuce and French dressing complete this salad.

Canned red cherries, sweet or sour, and raspberry or strawberry gelatin are other suggestions for the red part of the Christmas salad. Sweet cherries stuffed with cream cheese and served on cress with honey dressing are delicious.

The lines are the simple, comfortable ones which men appreciate. Style No. 3867 is designed for sizes A [34-36], B [38-40], C [42-44], and D [46-48]. Size B requires 5¾ yards of 35-inch fabric.

The winter fashion book, on sale at Tribune Public Service offices, is 15 cents, 12 cents if ordered by mail with a pattern.

Thru the Looking Glass

Last minute suggestion:

A remarkably handsome set of dusting powder and cologne in a provocative, beautiful scent that's called, rather cleverly, "Memory of Heather." It's fresh and sweet and ideally suited to the after-bath ritual. The cologne has a concentrated perfume base, which makes it lasting and much like a perfume, except that it's a lighter version. The powder is airy, gossamer stuff that makes a cool, fragrant film on the skin. You'll love the color scheme, especially as it is carried out in the bath powder box. It's dubonnet in a shiny finish, with stunning lettering in white and a flat white silk ribbon on the top. This duo isn't expensive, but it's chic—which means it's a life saver to the last minute shoppers.

You'll find soaps rather plentiful, and if you feel as we do about them you'll agree that when they're of good quality and scent they're almost inspired as gift selections. Your best bet may be to shop for these in the cosmetic lines. Any number of lines which you may think only make creams and lotions and perfumes offer some of the most exciting of soap gifts. You can pretty much write your own ticket as to scent and to color.

Not all the perfumes are gone from the shelves either. Some of the more famous old names may be missing, but you'll find some beauties among the lines that are purely American and that have come up since the war started.

True or False —All Gals Are Gold Diggers?

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A story has been going around that says all high school gals are strictly in the pink angel department as far as boy-girl friendships are concerned; that all such girls base their dating ethics on sincerity, fair play, and a respect for the difficulty of getting enough of that heigh-ho silver to pay for a Friday night date. But here's some inside information from a high school joe who claims that these gals are not the sweet and lovely characters they pretend to be. His complaint gives out this way:

on the SOLID side

"You always try to give the impression that high school girls are really a sensible lot, considerate of a fellow's money and opinions. That's dead wrong. Every girl I have ever dated, and that's no small number, has either been an out-and-out gold digger or has given the impression that she, when allowing me to honor my humble personage with her exalted company on a date, is doing me a great, big favor! Consequently, I, along with many friends, have formed a common opinion concerning women. To quote: 'Nuts.'

"And for a little more on this subject of females and folding lettuce, if you claim that there are still a lot of honest, nongold digging girls around, I'll admit that that's true. But it's only because they haven't had many dates. Just as soon as a gal begins to date a little she expects a fellow to 'pay' for her company. Try to find a girl these days who's content with a coke and a movie or a walk around the block! Part of the trouble lies with parents who are too free with money and privileges.

"About 50 per cent of the fellows I know [tho I do come from a suburb] are given all the money they can carry away by their parents and most of them have their own cars. The other 50 per cent have to ask their dads for the car well in advance, if they get it at all, wash and polish the precious jeep themselves, and we have to work for every dollar we get! But girls don't seem to realize that. What's the matter . . . at 17, aren't they still human?"

That's only one side of the story. Maybe young joe has just chanced to run into a few off-the-cob characters who count the fun they have on a date in terms of that folding lettuce; maybe most girls think that is the only way to have fun. What's your story, morning glory? Put your pros and cons down on paper and if the gals can line up a good defense argument, we'll let you have their answers.

Children Can Make Gifts at Last Minute

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If your children haven't bought or made all the gifts they are going to give and are clamoring for you to go on a shopping jaunt with them, and if you simply haven't the time to spend half of a precious day right now for that purpose, let me come to your aid by suggesting that you get them some simple supplies and let them make a few simple articles that still are really useful. While you are doing other things around the house you can give them directions and oversee their efforts, in case they need your guiding hand.

Get a package of blotters. Either use the full package, or cut it in half to make two gifts, or in three sections to make three gifts. Paste a piece of fancy paper on the top blotter, allowing a half inch margin all around, which is turned over the edge. Make a hole in the corner thru the set of blotters and tie with a colored ribbon or string or tape.

Kitchen memo pads. Buy a medium size pad, say 3 inches by 4 inches. Cut a piece of heavy cardboard about 2 inches larger all around. Cover the cardboard with a gay paper. Glue the pad in the center. A small pencil attached by a colored string is an appropriate addition.

Place doilies of oilcloth. For the smaller children select preferably a pattern that has a repeated geometrical design. Let the child cut out an oblong, place doily size, along the geometrical edge. Small squares can also be cut out for the tumbler or bread and butter plate.

Bags. These can range from the simplest form that the little child can make up thru pretty and fancy ones that have a variety of uses. Be sure that the little children do not work on too small pieces. Cut two pieces of material about 6 by 8 inches. Sew them together on three sides, leaving one end open. In this end make a hem about an inch deep with a running stitch. Make a little hole in the edge of the hem, run a ribbon, tape, or cord thru the slot with a bodkin or safety pin. Tie the ends with a knot or bow.

Clothespin bag. Use a heavy material for this. Have one piece of material 10 inches wide and 8 inches high, and the other 10 inches by 6 inches. Sew these two together, hemming the top edges of each separately. This will give a pocket, really, rather than a bag. Sew three big hooks in the top of the bigger piece, to hang on the clothesline, and put a running stitch vertically thru the middle of the bag, dividing it into two compartments.

Mrs. Earnest G., Chicago—To remove oil stains from our cement basement floor we covered the stains with an inch of dry portland cement. This seemed to draw out the oil and absorb it.

Mrs. Ella B., Kansas City, Mo.—I keep the following brief facts in back of my cookbook: Eight to 10 egg whites are equal to one cup; 10 to 14 egg yolks amount to one cup; and four to six whole eggs are equal to one cup.

Mrs. William B., Chicago—I have hand-washed my blankets for years and I follow two rules. One is to wash the blankets before soil gets embedded in them, and the other is to slosh suds thru and thru very thorely. I give the blankets several rinses to make sure no soap is left in them to flatten the fibers.

JOAN RELATES LOVE AND TIFFS WITH CHAPLIN

Testifies Comedian Is Her Baby's Father.

When told of the coming of the child, she testified, his first question was, "Joan, is it mine?" When told it was, he first suggested an operation, she said, and next suggested, after she said she was determined to bear it, that she "have it anyway," out of wedlock, that his attorneys would "fix it all up," and that all would be forgotten in two years. But he "wanted no part of matrimony," the witness declared.

Baby Coos and Gurgles.

Meanwhile, the nominal plaintiff, little Carol Ann Berry, a beautiful child with short red curls and big brown eyes, gurgled, cooed, waved a pink rag doll, and wailed. During Chaplin's testimony she occasionally broke out with a gay "daaa." He disregarded her magnificently. She seemed, however, to distract her mother, and was often removed from the courtroom.

As Miss Berry, her burnished Auburn hair glowing against a chartreuse coat, took the stand, the baby emitted a delighted gurgle. The mother smiled at it again and again, and continued to smile as she began her testimony, somewhere near the beginning of which was a remarkable understatement. "Do you know Mr. Charles Chaplin?" Scott had asked. "Yes," she said calmly, "I do."

Tells of Three Intimacies.

She then told, under questioning, of three intimacies with the ex-comedian in mid-December. The first, she said, took place around Dec. 10. She had been at a restaurant with Hans Reusch, "a young man," and ran into Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. King Vidor, and "a young girl." Chaplin said to her, "I'll see you later," she told the jury. She said she knew this meant he wanted her to come by his house, so she drove there alone around 11 p. m.

"I guess I was a little bit angry because he was with another girl," she testified. "I said, 'Charles, have you forgotten me so soon?' He said, 'no, I haven't forgotten you, but how about you? That was a handsome young man you were with.'

"We sat down on the sofa and talked about the second front . . . and we made up."

Eventually she went home, she testified. She drove herself. It was at about 2:30 a. m.

Breaks Two Glass Doors.

The next time she went to see him was on Dec. 23. That was the night she went armed with a gun. She told of this without hesitation. She broke in two glass doors, went up to Chaplin's bedroom, and heard him telephoning to some woman whom he called "dear." "Oh, hello, Joan," she said he said when he saw her. "Going to kill yourself?" When she said she was not, he said, "going to kill me?" Again she said no.

"What happened then?" Scott asked.

"I sat down on the edge of the bed. He said, 'Don't be silly. Give me that gun.' I said, 'No, Charles, I'm almost out of my mind. I'm almost crazy. You never call me.' He kept talking. . . . We were sort of reconciled. . . . Then he said, 'Would you like to stay here tonight?' and I said, 'Yes.'"

Upset by His Sons.

This all took place in Chaplin's bedroom, she said. He went downstairs to settle a commotion caused by the arrivals of his sons, Charles J., 19, and Sydney, 18, children by his second wife, Lita Grey Chaplin.

"Tell them to get the hell out of here," she said he told Edward Chaney, the butler, but amended that to permission for them to sleep in the guest room if the doors were locked. The boys, now in service, had explained, she said, that their car had broken down.

While he was gone she undressed and climbed into Chaplin's other twin bed. She wore the top of a pair of pajamas, she said, and looked at magazines until his return. She had placed the gun on the bedside table.

"What happened then?" Scott asked.

"He came back and sat on the bed beside me. We made up and went to bed."

She stayed there 45 minutes, she said, but Chaplin began to snore, so she asked if he minded if she went into the adjoining bedroom. She said he escorted her in, tucked her into bed, and kissed her. The parting exchange was "Give me the gun!" [from Chaplin]. To this she replied, "How will I know you will feel the same way tomorrow as you feel tonight? I am going to sleep with this gun right next to my heart."

Comes to Her Bedroom.

The next morning he came in, and asked how she slept. She had slept fine, thanks, but he said he hadn't slept well for worry that the gun might go off. Later Edward, the butler, came up, offered to get Chaplin to give her some money if she would give him the gun, and she complied. Then Chaplin came back.

Q.—Then what happened? A.—Charles came in and closed the door.

Q.—Were you fully clothed. A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mr. Chaplin? A.—Yes.

Says Chaplin' Has a Way.

"Go on," Scott requested gently.

"Well, Charles asked if I had another gun," she said. "I didn't."

They talked for a while, she said, in the course of which Chaplin asked her if she did not think he [Chaplin] looked like Peter Pan, and then repeated their intimacy.

Q.—When did you see him again?

A.—On the 30th.

Q.—What happened then? A.—Mr. Chaplin was expecting me. When he heard the car, he went around to the patio and met me. I said, 'I've come for my money.' [Chaplin had agreed to pay her $25 a week, she said.] He said, 'That's all you've come for?' I said, 'That's all I want from now on.' . . . Well, Mr. Scott, he has a way. He talked about Anatole France and Russia, and he again persuaded me.

On May 8, she said, she went to Chaplin's home. She went upstairs and found a nude young girl in his bed. Chaplin, was also there, unclothed, she said. "I said, 'I want to talk to you,'" she testified. He promised to meet her at the tennis courts but didn't come, she said. He sent his second man, Andrew, she testified, who reported that Mr. Chaplin wanted her to come back at 2 p. m. the following day. She didn't go because Edward, the butler, warned her Chaplin had told police to come arrest her at that time. Instead, she dropped in at 7 p. m. She was arrested and taken to the Beverly Hills jail. She was given a 60 days' vagrancy sentence, but it was suspended.

Talked All Day.

She next saw Chaplin on May 27. She first made an appointment with him by telephone.

Q.—Why did you want to see him? A.—I wanted to tell him I was going to have a baby.

Q.—What happened when you got there? A.—I said, "Charles, I must speak to you." He looked at me and said, "You poor baby. . . ." Then I said, "Charles, you're not talking about the baby at all." He stopped right there and looked at me and said, "Joan! Am I the father?" I said, "Yes, Charles, you are."

"He said, 'You could go to New York. I'll take care of the baby. I'll see my attorneys tomorrow. We'll fix it all up.' He was sitting beside me by that time.

"I said, 'Charles, are you going to marry me?' He jumped up and said, 'Joan, the minute you talk like that I lose all sympathy for you. You know what I think of marriage. You know what my peace of mind means to me. I'm going to have peace if I have to spend 20 years in jail to get it. For all I know I might have a lot of other children running around. All of those women don't want me to marry them!'"

Then she said he told her he was a great artist, that children were "a biological error," that we wanted to have no part of matrimony. They stayed at the pool all day, she said.

Angered by Rebuff.

"We sat there and talked," she related. "You know, he is very affectionate and very sweet."

She said he tried to entice her to a small dressing room near the tennis court.

"When you declined," asked Scott, "what happened?"

"He said, 'You won't?' and I said, 'No, I won't.' Then he lectured me."

Q.—Any part of that conversation refer to abortions?

A.—Yes. He said, 'Do you think it is too late to have an abortion?' I said, 'Charles, I want this baby.'"

Calls Chaplin Father.

"Who was the father of this baby?" Scott asked her.

"Charles Chaplin," she replied.

"Did you have any relations with any other man from Dec. 13 until the baby was born?"

"I did not," she replied, and then offered her stricken addition, "Mr. Scott, I have had no relations with any other man since I met Mr. Chaplin."

Chaplin was again on the stand as court opened today. He seemed to have his variable emotions under control today, or possibly had been insructed in calmness by his attorney after his angry display yesterday.

Scott began the day's questioning by again asking him when he last was intimate with Joan. "I know that all that ceased around February," [1942] he replied.

Capable of Fatherhood.

Scott asked him if he was capable of fatherhood and Chaplin said, "Yes."

Scott then again brought up the conversation Chaplin had with Joan beside his swimming pool in late May or early June, 1943.

"She accused me of being the father of her child," Chaplin began. "I said I could not possibly be the father of her child, that I had not seen her in more than a year. She said, 'Well, you are.'"

"Didn't she spend the night in your home in December?" Scott asked.

"Yes," Chaplin said.

He then told of his "lecturing" her beside the pool and denied he had offered to provide for the child but admitted he had threatened to tell of her "carrying on" if she brought suit. His own life, he testified, was an "open book."

Millikan waived cross-examination.

Butler Is Next Witness.

Chaney, formerly Chaplin's butler, next was called. He said Chaplin fired him on May 11, 1944, a month after the Mann act trial, at which Chaney's testimony in general was adverse for Chaplin.

He testified that Joan had spent many nights in Chaplin's house, using a bedroom known as Miss Goddard's room that is separated from Chaplin's by only a bath and dressing room. [Paulette Goddard was Chaplin's third wife.]

Scott first elicited from him the information that Oona O'Neill, who was married to Chaplin June 16, 1943, was at the Chaplin home for champagne cocktails on Dec. 10, 1942, and then led him to the controversial night of Dec. 23.

He saw Chaplin only once that night, he said, when Chaplin told him Joan was there with a gun.

In Her Room 2½ Hours.

He didn't see him again until breakfast the next day, he said, and did not see Joan at all until the next day. He found her then in "Miss Goddard's room," and she consented to give him the gun if he would intercede with Chaplin to get some money for her. All this was done, he said, and Chaplin then went upstairs."

He testified Chaplin remained upstairs 2½ hours and that during all that time the door to Miss Berry's room was closed.

On cross-examination Millikan sought to shake his testimony that Chaplin had spent 2½ hours in Miss Berry's bedroom. Edward said he was sure of the time because he was downstairs waiting to take Miss Berry home and had to miss the servants' lunch.

SIX CHICAGOANS LOSE APPEALS IN FILM EXTORTION

New York, Dec. 20 [Special].—Ten year prison sentences and fines of $10,000 each imposed several months ago on six former Chicagoans convicted of attempting to extort more than 1 million dollars from the motion picture industry were upheld today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Chicagoans are Louis Campagna, 44; Philip D'Andrea, 52; Francis Maritote, 50; Charles Gioe, 39; Paul De Lucia, 46, and John Rosselli, 39, all described by the government as members of the old Al Capone gang. They were accused of extorting money thru William Bioff and George E. Browne, former officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, both of whom had previously been convicted of extortion.

"They were a ruthless and grasping crew of blackmailers," the court's opinion said. "The crime struck at the very heart of civilized society."

TONIGHT'S GAMES.
Semi-Final Round.
7:30 p. m.—St. Patrick vs. St. George.
8:30 p. m.—De La Salle vs. St. Philip.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

St. Philips' Gaels will meet the De La Salle Meteors in one of two semi-final games in the 11th St. George High school pre-season senior basketball tournament in Evanston tonight. The Gaels, coached by Clem Naughton, qualified for this evening's opportunity to go on to their first tournament championship by eliminating Leo's Lions, 42 to 30, in last night's quarter finals.

Hold Lead from Start.

The south side Lions, co-favorites with St. Philip to capture the title, played hard and furiously, but the Gaels proved a smooth, fast, breaking aggregation which refused to be denied.

De La Salle advanced by conquering Holy Trinity, 28 to 15, in one of three other quarter final contests last night. The Meteors were ahead at the end of each of the first three quarters, 4 to 3, 12 to 7, and 17 to 11, respectively.

Defending Champs Lose.

The St. Patrick Shamrocks, who started play in Monday's first round as a dark horse but was lifted to the status of second choice to win the tournament by routing St. Gregory, 32 to 14, gained additional prestige last night in disposing of Mount Carmel, the defending champion, 40 to 23. It was the Shamrocks' ninth consecutive victory.

St. George qualified for the semi-final round by beating St. Mel, 37 to 29, in the final game last night.

Preview Tonight

FORECASTS on New Year's day Bowl football games will feature Arch Ward's Sports Preview, which will be aired over WENR from 9:15 to 9:30 tonight. The program, last of the football cycle, will stress the contribution America's competitive games have made in the prosecution of the war.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD.

THE University of Nebraska's athletic fortunes, just now at the lowest ebb in history, should receive a boost at the start of the next semester with the return of Howard Debus, former football and track star, who recently was granted a medical discharge from the army. . . . Considered one of the Huskers' best passers in 1941, when he appeared in the Rose bowl, he also was developing into an outstanding track man—in the pole vault, javelin throw, shotput and discus. . . . Edward (Slip) Madigan, Iowa football coach, took the longer southern route when he left for his California home last week. . . . "It took me a month to get here," said Slip, on his arrival at Iowa City, "and if it required that long for this jaunt, my vacation would be over." . . . One of the greatest boosters for compulsory physical fitness programs in schools based on competitive athletics is Col. Bernie Bierman, the Minnesota football coach and original athletic director at Iowa Pre-Flight school. . . . "Since returning to civilian life from service in the marine corps, I have heard a lot of people talking physical fitness and it's about time for a uniform program," says Bierman. "Admirals in the South Pacific, skeptical about the ambitious training program adopted in the pre-flight schools when the war began, now are enthusiastic supporters." . . . Natives of Marshalltown, Ia., finally have stopped talking about that great high school football team which rolled up a 140 to 0 score over neighboring Hampton back near the turn of the century, with the aid of the Kirk brothers and Maury Kent, veteran Northwestern and Iowa coach. . . . The reason is Willard Shaw, the gifted all-round back, who has sparked the Marshalltown eleven to two claims on the state championship. . . . P. S.—Shaw reportedly is headed for the University of Iowa to study medicine.

Keith Topping, former star end at Stanford university, now a marine corps combat correspondent, has seen a lot of action in the Pacific, including the landing on Guam. . . . Hugh Gallarneau, the famed Stanford full back, also was in the party as a marine officer. . . . Sgt. Johnny Sturm, the Yankee infielder, who played soccer with the army depot team at Kearns, Utah, has been named to the all-state honorary squad. . . . Jack Clark, for 14 years sports editor of the Alameda [Cal.] Times-Star, is with the merchant marine in the Pacific. . . . Ty Cobb, playing right field, once threw out three runners at first base in a single game. . . . Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin coach and athletic director, was asked if he did any punting while a member of the Four Horsemen. . . . "O, yes," said Harry, "but I was strictly a spot punter. . . . The only time I punted was when we were trapped inside the other team's 20 yard line." . . . Frankie Parker played tennis for 13 years before winning the national singles title.

Getting Close to Christmas.

Getting close to Christmas,
How the seasons come and go.
Each of us is thinking
Of the man friends we know.

Some of us are thinking
Of our boys across the sea—
Lads who fight on many fronts
To bring us victory.

Getting close to Christmas,
And across the surging foam,
In our hearts and theirs, the hope
That they will soon be home.

Getting close to Christmas,
And a spirit once again,
And thrill the hearts of men.

From Oregon to Maine,
Hope and faith and courage rise,
Where once was grief and pain.

Getting close to Christmas,
And my wish, sincere and true—
Is that you, and all of yours,
Will see each dream come true.

Shipmates.

[For Lt. Mark A. Minahan, Southwest Pacific.]

You were not there the day I stood
Before the colors high,
You were not there, but, listen, dad,
We missed you, mom and I.

No, you were not there that day,
You rode some southern sea;
Perhaps you helped to win a beach,
Or make an island free.

You did not hear the words I said,
You said them twice, you know;
Two times you heard the call to arms,
Two wars have bade you go.

And, tho you were not there, I know
You also would be glad,
For now I'm in the navy, too,

It Happened in Dubuque.

Remember last year's story about the new part time clerk in one of the Main street bazars who rang up "No Sale" on the cash register every time any one "just looked" and didn't buy anything? Well, this year, it seems, she has a sister stuperoo. Comes now the tale of a new girl, also part time, in one of the dime stores who, during the pre-holiday rush, rang up $5 every time she made a sale, regardless of what the amount of the purchase was.

A customer who bought several articles at that counter at different times the same day noticed this and reported it to the manager. When he questioned the girl, she readily admitted the story—yes, she had rung up $5 every time she made a sale.

"And just why," inquired the manager with a touch of the old ice in his voice, "did you do that, may I ask?"

"Well," replied the girl, naively, "I didn't think it made any difference which key you punched as long as you put the money in the drawer. I kind o' liked the $5 one, so I just kept on using it."

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The New York Rangers, riled, perhaps, by the knowledge they hadn't won a game in Chicago Stadium since Nov. 26, 1942, took care of that depressing statistic last night by whipping the Blackhawks, 3 to 1, before 8,881 pausing Christmas shoppers.

Angered by what he termed a most unsatisfactory showing by the Blackhawks, William J. Tobin, president of the club, announced immediately after the game that wholesale replacements will be made to strengthen the Chicago team. He instructed Johnny Gottselig to comb every minor league team in the country for talent and added that after Gottselig completes his tour of the United States, amateur leagues in Canada also will be visited in the hope of finding players who can make a better showing in National league competition.

Karakas' Work Spectacular.

The score of last night's game, which dumped the Chicagoans back into unshared tenancy of the National league cellar, might easily have been 15 to 1, but for some brilliant goal tending by Mike Karakas, which was particularly spectacular thruout the first period and until Phil Watson of the Rangers tied the score at 1 to 1 in 8:51 of the second period. [Cully Dahlstrom had scored the Chicago goal in 5:39 of the second period.]

The winning goal was made by Defenseman Hank Goldup a little more than six minutes after the tie had been effected. The goal the Rangers didn't need was made by Kilby MacDonald in 16:54 of the final period.

Rangers Gain Fifth Place.

It was the fourth game of the season between the teams, who shared the cellar when the game began. The Hawks won the first meeting, 8 to 3, then there were 4 to 4 and 1 to 1 ties. Each of the outfits has won three games in league competition this year.

Except for Karakas' play the Hawks bore little resemblance to the aggregation which beat the Detroit Red Wings here Sunday night.

After a first period which produced five penalties but no goals, the scoring started at 5:39 of the second period, when Dahlstrom whanged home a fast one after picking up a rebound following a nice shot by Pete Horeck.

Watson's Shot Ties Score.

The lead vanished shortly after Lude Check was put in the penalty box for hooking. Grant Warwick, Ab DeMarco and Watson precipitated a melee in front of the Hawk cage. Goalie Karakas was down and trying like everything to smother the puck but Watson got it three feet from the goal post to Mike's left and slapped it into a wide open space to tie the score. The time was 8:51 and Warwick and De Marco were credited with assists.

Goldup and MacDonald outskated the Hawk defense to put the Rangers ahead, 2 to 1. The pair zigzagged Karakas out of position and Goldup got the tie breaking goal on perfect duo maneuver.

On the superfluous New York goal in the third period, Fred Thurrier and Goldup earned assists.

The Hawks will not play at home until New Year's night, then will go away until Jan. 13.

WILLIAMS HOPES TO COACH FIVE AT GREAT LAKES

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 20 [Special].—Lt. Comdr. Rollie Williams, former University of Wisconsin basketball star and University of Iowa basketball coach before entering the navy, said tonight he will report at Great Lakes naval center for assignment about Jan. 4.

Lt. Comdr. Williams.

Lt. Comdr. Williams, who arrived home last night after serving as athletic director at a naval base near Pearl Harbor, said that altho nothing had been said about his becoming basketball coach at Great Lakes, he hoped his new assignment would include coaching.

Coached at Pre-Flight.

"I have been away from basketball since 1942," said Williams, "and I certainly would be very happy to get back into it again. I know nothing of the basketball material at Great Lakes or the system being used. If I do coach, it would mean starting from scratch for both the team and myself."

After Williams was granted a leave of absence at Iowa, he was assigned to the Iowa Pre-Flight school and coached the Seahawk quintet. In May of 1943 he was ordered to report for overseas duty.

Served in First War.

Williams enlisted in the navy the first time while a student at Wisconsin and coached both basketball and football at Great Lakes in the first World war.

ROSE BOWL DRILL FOR VOLUNTEERS ON WEST COAST

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 20 (AP).—Tennessee's Volunteers arrived today and immediately started preparing for their New Year's day Rose bowl game with Southern California.

Coach John Barnhill sent his 38 charges thru a brisk two hour drill and said he planned to work his players twice daily to make up for the time lost at home due to bad weather. He grinned broadly at the warm sun.

"A few days of this is what we need most," he said.

Connie Mack, Nearing 82, Talks of '45

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20 (AP).—Connie Mack, who will be 82 Saturday, leaned back in the December sunshine and told a reporter his Athletics might surprise the Philadelphia fans next season. His eyes twinkling, he added:

"There are so many if's in these trying war times, but I'm hoping the Athletics will shape up a little better next season."

"The game will prosper despite threatened man power shortages. Honorably discharged service men, men physically unfit for service, youngsters, and oldsters will supply the playing talent."

He grew mellow about the thought of reaching his 82d year.

"Life seems such a short time as I look back," he said. "However, I'll have to admit each year seems to slip by a little faster. In fact, the years fairly fly after a man reaches 50."

He and his wife, Katherine, are wintering in southern California.

CARDINALS VOTE A $3 DIVIDEND TO STOCKHOLDERS

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 20 (AP).—The board of directors of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals voted a $3 dividend to the club's 130 stockholders today. The dividend payment will total $30,456 on the 10,152 shares of stock, approximately 75 per cent of which is held by President Sam Breadon.

The Cardinals-Browns six game world series drew 206,708 fans who paid $906,122 to see the Redbirds win their second world's title in three years. Each club's share of the series receipts was $59,021.32.

COACH SNAVELY LEAVES CORNELL FOR N. CAROLINA

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Carl Snavely, head football coach at Cornell since 1936, accepted appointment late today as head coach at the University of North Carolina, where he was coach in 1934 and 1935. The contract calls for five years at a reported $12,000 annual salary.

Carl Snavely.

Dr. Robert B. House, dean of administration, in announcing Snavely's acceptance a few hours after Cornell had granted him a release from his present contract, said the selection was subject to ratification by the North Carolina board of trustees at its next meeting, in January.

Action Follows Conference.

Snavely, whose teams lost only two games in his previous two year tenure as head man of the Tar Heels, came here two days ago to talk with university officials, stopping off on his way to Montgomery, Ala., where he will coach the North team in the annual Blue-Gray game.

Snavely's first team at Chapel Hill lost only to Tennessee and his 1935 eleven only to Duke. He produced in Guard George Barclay the first All-American turned out at North Carolina.

Coached 1941 All-Stars.

GOLF TO REACH NEW HEIGHTS IN '45, SAYS NELSON

[Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., top flight golfer and big money winner selected as 1944's male athlete of the year in the Associated Press poll, has written the following article on golfdom's contribution to the war effort.]

BY BYRON NELSON.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20 (AP).—It is a real distinction to have been named athlete of the year for 1944. Viewing it from a broader picture it is a source of great satisfaction to me and to my fellow golfers to consider that the game of golf has been accorded this recognition.

Those golfers among us who were rejected for military service felt we could devote our talents thru exhibitions and tournaments in which the prime purpose would be to stimulate the sale of war bonds as well as provide entertainment for service men now undergoing rehabilitation.

Tells of Bond Sales.

The results have been especially gratifying. All of our big tournaments this year have been played for war bonds. Bonds have been sold at every course. For instance, the ball with which Sam Snead won the Richmond, Cal., tournament was auctioned to the highest bond buyer. It sold for $100,000 in bonds.

Galleries this year have been among the largest in the history of golf. Our Professional Golfers' association rehabilitation program for service men is playing a grand part for the boys returning from overseas. The P. G. A. has encouraged and lent support toward construction of many new golf courses at rehabilitation centers.

I think that more service men than ever have been following our tournaments and exhibitions, and golf has acquired more enthusiasts than ever before. It is my belief that golf in 1945 will hit an all-time high both in interest and competition.

400 Members in Service.

Naturally many of our top players are now in Uncle Sam's service but we have a strong field of players in Snead, recently discharged from the navy; Craig Wood, Sam Byrd, Bob Hamilton, Willie Goggin, John Revolta, Henry Picard, Harold McSpaden, Denny Shute, Toney Penna, Ky Laffoon, Leonard Ott, John Geertsen, George Schneiter, Ted Longworth, Charles Congdon, and Jimmy Walkup Jr., to name a few.

Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran already has arranged tournaments for 1945 valued in more than $3,000,000 in war bonds.

We have some 400 members of our Professional Golfers' association in the service, and in taking part in more than 75 war charity exhibitions, visiting army and navy camps and hospitals this year, I have felt I was representing my absent fellow members by making the best possible use of what ability I may have on the links.

Thompsons Near 1st Half Classic Title

The Thompson Restaurants proved they could bowl under pressure in last night's Classic league session at Park Manor Lanes.

Going into the evening's crucial roll down deadlocked for first place with the defending champion Meister Braus and with only six more games to decide the first half championship, they swamped the Prima Beers by sweeping their series while their former co-inhabitants of the top spot were taking a two game defeat at the hands of Keeleys Half and Half.

The Thompsons racked up the high total of the evening in taking three with 3,309, gathered on games of 1,057, 1,019, and 963. The opener was also high in that department. Jake Lenzen took the individual honors with his lofty 690 series on games of 241, 243, and 206.

Chapin & Gore retained third place in the scramble, one game out of second and three off the leaders' pace, by winning a pair from Sunkist Pies. In other matches Monarch Beer lost a pair to Du Bouchett Liquors. Tubby Reichert of the latter came thru with the high single game of the battle with a 263 for his last effort. Congress Arcade lost three to the Washington Shirts in the other match.

WILDCATS LOOK FOR KEEN FIGHT WITH BRONCOS

Northwestern university's basketball team, undefeated in two starts, will face its toughest assignment to date Saturday, when it will meet the Broncos of Western Michigan in the Evanston High school gymnasium.

The Broncos, losers only to Michigan in their first four games, are highly rated and Coach Dutch Lonborg is anxious to see how his squad reacts to opposing height. The Wildcats proved they could handle speed in their victories over DePauw and Marquette universities. The size factor is the unknown quantity in the Lonborg basketball formula.

Beat Wildcats Last Season.

Last season Western Michigan upset the Wildcats, 47 to 45, in the opening game of the season. The Broncos went on to end the season with a national collegiate ranking of fifth place. But the squad is entirely new this year and only one man, Glen Selbo, guard, has had collegiate experience. He was a Wisconsin reserve last year.

The Bronco lineup all scales 6 feet or better with only one man. Guard Johnny Buscher, hitting the minimum. Selbo is 6 feet 2. Both forwards, Don Groggel and Ralph Welton, are an inch above the 6 foot mark, and the center, Walt Lamishka, scales 6 feet 3.

The Bronco over-all height is only one inch above that of the starting Wildcats. Coach Lonborg will stick with his twice successful combination of Phil Lofgren, 5 feet 11, and Duane Sickels, 6 feet 2, at the forwards; Max Morris, 6 feet 2, at center; and Benny Schadler, 6 feet, and Frank Wright, 6 feet 3, at guards.

Morris Sets Scoring Pace.

Morris, sophomore V-12 sailor, leads the Wildcat offensive with 35 points in the first two games. He scored 18 against DePauw and added 17 last Saturday as he paced the Wildcats' victory over Marquette. Sickels netted 13 last Saturday to run his total to 22, while Wright, a converted center, has 21 to his credit.

Schadler, one of the best Wildcat shots last year, got off to a slow start with seven points against DePauw, but added 11 more in the Marquette game and showed definite signs he was regaining his touch.

Win in New York.

Western Michigan opened its year with a 45 to 33 victory over Kellogg Field. The next week the Michigan Wolverines scored their first victory over the Broncos, 48 to 36, and added another last Saturday, 50 to 35. But between these two triumphs the Western Michigan squad made a trip to New York's Madison Square Garden, where it defeated Brooklyn college, 58 to 52.

This will be the first of two vacation engagements for the Wildcats as they prepare for the Big Nine opener against Wisconsin at Madison Jan. 6. A week from Saturday the Bluejackets of Great Lakes will take the Evanston High school floor, seeking revenge for last year's Wildcat victory.

ATHLETIC LOSS AT ILLINOIS FOR YEAR IS $5,258

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 20 (AP).—The Athletic association of the University of Illinois showed a net loss of $5,258 from all operations from Aug. 1, 1943, to July 31, 1944, the 16th annual financial report of student and other university organizations showed today.

Showing a profit, however, were the 1943 football season, which netted $70,904 from receipts of $100,559; the 1943-'44 basketball season, which netted $5,583 from receipts of $18,367, and the golf course, which netted $621.

Losses were recorded in baseball, tennis, track, wrestling, intramural and recreational sports, and other activities.

BETTER WIRING MADE POSSIBLE BY SYNTHETICS

Longer Life, Varied Colors Promised.

BY HERSCHEL PATTERSON.

The vast war time development of the synthetic rubber and plastics industries has proved a boon to the producers of insulated wire and cables, with extensive post-war applications that will revolutionize the type of some products, industry spokesmen said yesterday.

Whipple Jacobs.

For instance, wire used in the home will be made in a wide variety of colors to blend with the room furnishings or decorations, will be a better product from a use standpoint, and will be safer, they explained.

Last Longer, More Resistant.

Among the advantages of synthetic rubber and plastics as insulators for wire are their long wearing qualities, resistance to sun, oil, and water, and ability to withstand cracking tendencies, said Whipple Jacobs, president of Belden Manufacturing company which produces insulated wire and cable.

"Producers of insulated wire definitely will be in the market for part of the output of the synthetic rubber and plastics industries," Jacobs said. "The extent of the use of some of the synthetics will depend on price, but in some cases, especially in household application, they will be used even tho the cost is a little higher.

"We are going to build wire for consumers designed much more directly to need than before. Whereas in the past the rubber insulated wire has been available in a few solid colors, the synthetic rubber can be made into a variety of colors, including the pastel shades."

Valuable in Television.

One of the most important uses of polyethylene synthetic rubber after the war will be in cables for television where an insulator is required that will provide a low electrical loss. The cable will be used chiefly as a transmission wire between relay stations, Jacobs said.

"This synthetic is admirably suited for television application," he said, "and has been a large factor in its development. I do not see how it is possible for natural rubber to come back in this field, regardless of cost."

A synthetic rubber compound gives lamp cords much longer life than that of the pre-war cords on which a natural rubber insulation was used, with a resulting increase in the safety element, he said. These cords can be made in a variety of hues.

Can Meet Specific Needs.

He explained that the principal wire insulation materials before the war were natural rubber, cotton, paper, silk, asbestos, varnished cambric, and oleo-resinous enamels.

"Rubber compounds are not very oil resistant or flame resistant and tend to deteriorate with age," Jacobs said. "They are in general excellent insulators, but lack other desirable properties. Any of these properties may be very desirable for cable insulation or important for any specific electrical equipment or apparatus.

"With the variety of insulation materials now available, it will be possible to meet the most exacting specification of the electrical equipment designer to suit any particular application much better than heretofore possible."

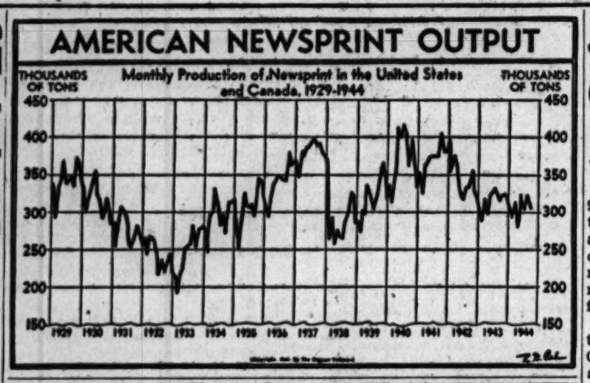
Nylon, Fine Glass Used.

Another synthetic, nylon, has taken an important place in the wire industry. In place of fine silk yarn, the industry is using fine nylon yarns. Fine glass yarns are replacing asbestos yarn to insulate magnet wire for high temperature electrical coil windings, resulting in much improved efficiency, Jacobs said.

"Enameled magnet wire has been insulated with oleo-resinous varnishes," he said. "Synthetic products, polyvinyl-acetal or nylon, provide an insulation film superior in abrasion and heat resistance. The films are more flexible and are much less subject to chemical change."

He said neophrene synthetic rubber will be widely used for wire insulation in garages because of its high resistance to oils. A wide application in plane and automotive electrical wiring is predicted for vinylite, a plastic synthetic, because it can be used with a thin coating and is extremely oil resistant.

AMERICAN NEWSPRINT OUTPUT



Urge City Ban Sale of Lots Minus Utilities

BY AL CHASE.

The Chicago Plan commission yesterday asked the city council to amend its subdivision development ordinances to prohibit "wildcat" subdividers from selling lots which have neither improvements nor transportation and which may eventually turn into a new blighted area. The request was contained in resolutions adopted at the suggestion of A. H. Mellinger, chairman of the commission, which urged the city to adopt recommendations transmitted to it in June, 1943, but which have never been acted upon.

The recommendations were that city ordinances require that every developer grade and improve streets and alleys, install curbs and sidewalks, plant street trees, and install sewers and water mains in the land which he is platting for lot sales.

Bill Returned for Study.

The proposed new ordinance was returned by the council to the plan commission for further study and submitted to the Chicago Real Estate board and the Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association. H. Evert Kincaid, executive director of the plan commission, said neither body has taken any definite action.

Meanwhile, the council has approved plans for two subdivision firms to sell land west and south of the Altgeld Gardens, a 1,500 unit federal housing project nearing completion at 134th st. and Ellis av.

"These subdivisions are not intended as a part of a housing program, but evidently are being platted for sale of unimproved lots," said Kincaid. "No improvements are being installed, nor are they available."

Plat Not in Harmony.

The plat submitted for one is not in harmony with the curving streets of Altgeld Gardens, and the entire objective of creating an integrated planned community in that vicinity would be defeated, Kincaid told the plan commission members. He added, however, that the sponsors have indicated a willingness to cooperate in laying out the subdivision in harmony with the big federal project.

"These subdivision problems are reminiscent of the 1925 period when many miles of Chicago area were subdivided and lots sold without improvements," Kincaid said. "Nearly 12 square miles of such platted subdivisions still remain undeveloped because of the lack of control and the inability of scattered ownerships to effect any improvements to make the lots accessible."

HARDWOOD LOG CEILINGS SET IN MICHIGAN AREA

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Specific ceiling prices for hardwood logs produced in the southern part of lower Michigan were set today by OPA. Prices of the two top grades were unchanged, but lower grades will sell for less.

OPA said the specific prices for veneer and No. 1 grades are the same as those which manufacturers of agricultural baskets and other containers have been paying. Ceilings for No. 2 and woodsrun grades will be $7.50 to $15 per 1,000 feet below old prices.

Chicago Area Electricity Output Exceeds Year Ago

Chicago area electricity output of the Commonwealth Edison group of companies, excluding sales to other electric utilities, last week increased 3 per cent to 209,898,000 kilowatt hours from 203,690,000 a year earlier, the company said yesterday.

UNION BACKS STRIKE BAN WITH FINES, ASKS JOB LOSS FOR REBELS

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 20 (AP).—In what union leaders described as a demonstration of "union responsibility" in the war, the office of the CIO United Rubber Workers was kept open until midnight tonight to collect union imposed fines from 600 rubber workers for a strike Oct. 16-19. Midnight was the deadline for payment of the fines, each $12.50. Failure to pay might mean loss of jobs.

The fines were assessed by order of Sherman Dalrymple, national president, for "violation of the no-strike pledge" in a walkout at the Detroit plant of the United States Rubber company. Of approximately 1,000 strikers who disregarded Dalrymple's return to work order, only 400 had paid their fines or had been exonerated on appeals up to today.

Robert Hill, union international representative, said that under the contract calling for "good standing" membership, the union expected the company to "pull the cards" of employes who fail to pay the fine and that the war man power commission would be expected to refuse them certification to other jobs.

"This is going to decide whether our no-strike pledge is going to mean anything," Hill said. "If the government won't back up the union, I can't for the life of me see what will stop strikes in other plants."

Act Against Strike Leaders.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 20 (AP).—Thomas E. Flynn, assistant to President Daniel J. Tobin of the AFL International Teamsters' union, said today 300 truck drivers on strike in St. Louis had been ordered back to work because the walkout was "wholly without authorization." Flynn said officials of the local union had been instructed to prefer charges against the strike leaders.

KEN-RAD SELLS ITS RADIO TUBE BUSINESS TO G. E.

Owensboro, Ky., Dec. 20 (AP).—Ken-Rad Tube and Lamp corporation stockholders today authorized the sale of all assets used in connection with the manufacture and sale of radio tubes to the General Electric company, Schenectady, N. Y.

The corporation retained its lamp making business with its buildings and equipment in Owensboro, and sold to General Electric the radio tube manufacturing plants at Tell City, Rockport, and Huntingburg, Ind., and Bowling Green and Owensboro, Ky.

The price, expected to exceed 5 million dollars, is subject to an inventory as of Jan. 2, 1945, when the transfer becomes effective. The Citizens Fidelity Bank and Trust company of Louisville is majority stockholder in the Ken-Rad corporation.

$209,000 Rent Over-Charge Refunds Made

Residential tenants received $151,939 in rent overcharges this year thru action of the office of price administration federal rent control office in Chicago, John J. Ryan, director, said yesterday in his annual report. The overcharges ranged from $2.50 to $175.

In addition, voluntary contributions totaling $57,083 were made to OPA by landlords for former tenants who were overcharged, but could not be located.

Registrations Are Increased.

Ryan said a "compliance drive" in which volunteers aided government officials in locating owners of apartments and houses who had failed to register with the OPA added 29,901 names to make a total registration of 802,288. Registry of hotels and rooming houses was increased 1,885 units, to 12,430.

"Ignorance of the necessity of registering was the principal reason for the failure of the 29,901 new registrants to sign before," said Ryan. "In addition, there were some new properties."

Petitions for rent adjustments, nearly all for increases, were filed by 12,253 landlords, his report said. Of these, 7,774 were granted. Of 8,972 applications by tenants for decreases, 2,564 were granted.

Landlords Evict 56,546.

During the year the rent office received notice from landlords of 56,546 evictions for failure to pay rent, disorderly conduct, and other causes. It also handled 9,304 petitions by persons who bought properties asking for eviction certificates so they could take possession. Of these 4,801 were granted, 4,160 were denied, and 443 remain pending.

Ryan said an amendment effective July 1, permitted the office to bring suit against rent control violators within 30 days if tenants themselves did not bring action.

STOP NUT LOSS ATTRIBUTED TO VARIED CAUSES

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 20 (AP).—Records of the Elastic Stop Nut corporation, Union, N. J., presented to the securities and exchange commission today, reported a $470,000 loss last August was attributable to overspending, inability to reduce manufacturing costs, fewer sales, failure to supply orders in time, and contract cancelations.

SEC Investigator Douglas M. Orr testified the reasons for the loss were outlined in minutes of a board of directors meeting on Sept. 29. The SEC is holding a public hearing to determine whether the company violated securities legislation in registering its debentures and applying for listing of its common stock on the New York Stock exchange.

K. A. Swanstrom, Doylestown, Pa., who resigned as president in 1942, testified he had opposed employment of more executives and that he had declined an invitation to a meeting of the "more important members of the board" because other directors were not asked.

BANK'S CAPITAL, SURPLUS RAISED 50 PCT. IN YEAR

The capital structure of the National Boulevard Bank of Chicago has been increased by one half million dollars, or 50 per cent, in the last year, J. De Forest Richards, president, said yesterday.

On Dec. 28, 1943, capital was increased 50 per cent from $500,000 to $700,000 and surplus from $500,000 to $600,000. Last May surplus was increased by $50,000 and again this month by $100,000, which gives the bank a present capital of $750,000, surplus of $750,000, and undivided profits of $100,000.

Substantial reserves have been set aside to care for unforeseen contingencies, Richards asserted.

MASONITE LIFTS QUARTER PROFIT THO SALES FALL

Masonite corporation, Chicago, yesterday reported earnings in the quarter ended Nov. 30 increased from a year ago altho net sales decreased to $3,897,713 from $4,701,263. Profit was $317,209, or 46 cents a common share, against $282,555, or 45 cents a share.

The sales decline was not attributable to shortages of finished goods or a decrease in the backlog of orders, but rather to inability to meet shipping schedules because of labor shortages and delays in meeting unusual military crating requirements, the company said.

Graham-Paige War Work Schedule Much Increased

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 20 (AP).—War production scheduled by Graham Paige Motors corporation for the next six months exceeds the total for the entire year of 1944, when approximately 50 million dollars worth of armament was produced, Joseph W. Frazer, chairman, said today.

F. D. R. SIGNS BIG POST-WAR ROAD BUILDING BILL

Calls for 3 Billions of Expenditures.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—President Roosevelt today signed a bill authorizing a $1,673,250,000 federal contribution toward a $3,173,250,000 three year post-war highway program and praised congress for making possible advance planning of "needed facilities on a sound basis."

"Now it becomes a challenge to the states, counties, and cities which must originate the specific projects and get the program ready for construction after the war ends," the President wrote.

States would supply 1½ billion dollars on a matching basis to become eligible for an equal amount of the federal money, authorized by the bill but not yet appropriated. The federal government would spend, over the same years, $173,250,000 for parkway, forest, and Indian reservation roads.

Recognizes Needs of Cities.

Mr. Roosevelt commented that the legislation made several important changes in national policy for highway development, including authority for designation by state and federal governments of an interregional highway network.

He said the measure also "gives practical recognition to the transportation problem of our cities by extending federal aid to projects in urban areas which will reduce traffic congestion and accidents."

Substantial authorizations were included for farm-to-market roads serving rural populations, he said, and funds were authorized "for at least a beginning of the huge task of replacing or rebuilding the main roads on our federal aid system which are being worn out by the heavy burden of war time traffic."

States Must Match Funds.

Adequate highway communication facilities will be essential in the future to "an expanding prosperous economy that will insure jobs" as well as to national defense and safe and efficient transportation services, the President said.

The authorization bill was pushed to passage late in the year to enable state legislatures, most of which meet in January, to appropriate matching funds.

The program calls for the government and the states to spend 225 million each for each of the three years on the regular federal aid highway system, 150 million each on secondary, including farm-to-market roads, and 125 million each on federal highways entering cities.

WINTER WHEAT CROP PROSPECT REPORTED GOOD

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—The department of agriculture reported today the winter wheat crop has made such a favorable start this fall that harvest next summer may total 761,591,000 bushels.

This estimate was determined from measurable factors such as the reported condition of the crops as of Dec. 1, and rainfall and temperatures to date, the department said. To be added to the winter wheat is production from spring wheat seeded next spring. Altho no estimate of spring wheat production can be made at this time, officials said a 300 million bushel crop was possible.

This year's harvest yielded 764,073,000 bushels of winter wheat and 314,574,000 of spring—a total of 1,078,647,000, which topped all records.

STEERS STRONG ON LIGHT SUPPLY OF HIGHER GRADE

Brisk demand for steers at prices that were strong to 25 cents a hundred pounds higher developed at the Chicago stock yards yesterday when volume dipped below normal. Better grades were strongest because quality was below par for midweek, indicating that cattle men were holding back part of their best animals because of the recent price pressure on prime steers.

The $18 top was 25 cents above the preceding day and 50 cents above last week's close, but remained 50 cents under the 1944 high paid frequently prior to last week.

Eastern buying orders for best grade lambs raised the top price 15 cents to $15, equal to the peak since early September. Hogs rallied after an early drop, but the average for the entire session was down 15 cents.

Western Rails Handle Record Freight Load with Less Delay

Western railroads last month set a new record in westward freight car movements with an average of 4,800 cars daily, William F. Kirk, regional director of the office of defense transportation's rail division, said yesterday. He said that, despite increased volume and a shortage of 25,000 workers, the railroads were doing a better job than a year ago.

"The roads are hauling all the freight given them, with less delay than a year ago," he said. "In addition to the heavy military burden, the railroads are carrying the loads normally handled by coastal shipping and oil tankers, a record grain crop, and immense ore shipments. The average pre-war freight haul was 300 miles, but a freight car load now moves an average of more than 500 miles."

Traffic Continues to Rise.

The ODT in a report on the year's war transportation activities said the volume of freight on railroads, highways, and water routes continues to increase.

Lake freighters moved 81,170,538 tons of iron ore and 107 million bushels of grain on the Great Lakes this year, said F. S. Keiser, associated ODT director in charge of ore and grain movements.

"Railroads hauled the ore between mines and Lake Superior loading docks, and midwestern roads hauled 1,293,854 carloads of grain thru June to November," he said. "The rail grain movement was slightly less than in 1943 because of the diversion of government shipments to lake vessels when possible."

Trucks Idle, Lacking Tires.

"In 11 districts of the region, more than 200 of these plans are saving 8,600,000 miles a month for operators delivering coal, flowers, groceries, laundry, dry cleaning, ice, and other items," he said. "Similar conservation plans by dairy farmers had saved an estimated 30 million miles by early last fall.

"Maintenance of tire and equipment remains the most serious problem in highway transport. There were 1,056 trucks, 163 buses, and 201 tank trucks laid up for lack of tires early in December in this region.

"According to notice received from the war production board, the national quota of truck and bus tires for the first quarter next year will be reduced by a million tires, because of increased military requirements. Highway operators can expect a slightly better supply of replacement parts, but the tire situation is serious."

Urge Aircraft Industry, U. S. to Co-operate

The aircraft industry and government must coördinate their efforts now if the industry is to maintain itself in a healthy financial condition after the war, said a study made public yesterday by the Harvard Business school.

"During the last year, industry and government leaders have given increasing recognition to the vital importance of an orderly conversion of the aircraft industry to peace time operations," said the study. "The influence which orderly and prompt contract termination settlements will have on post-war levels of employment in the major aircraft production centers is generally recognized.

Keep Development Alive.

"Increasing attention is being paid to the importance of keeping alive aeronautical development work and a nucleus of production facilities and skills at the time when large scale war contracts are being canceled. Recognition is given to the effect on our national air power of continued development, not merely in military aircraft, but in transports which must compete in world markets."

Despite increased recognition of the importance of orderly conversion, many problems remain to be solved, the study warned. A danger still exists that the lack of coördinated industry and government preparations and the sheer mechanics of contract termination procedures will so delay conversion that future development and employment will be harmed.

Tells Ways to Survive.

The study said the average airframe manufacturer will be able to survive the immediate post-war adjustment period with a reasonably satisfactory financial position only if the following conditions are met:

1. If contract terminations are administered with a reasonableness consistent with the broad policies set forth in the contract termination act of 1944.

2. If the company sets up its own administrative organization to handle termination properly, concentrating before the end of the war on effective inventory management.

3. If the management curtails expenses realistically and rapidly.

Apart from termination and tax problems aircraft manufacturers are confronted with the basic question: Conversion into what after the war? The answer will be vitally affected by post-war government policies, including army-navy procurement, plant and equipment disposal, surplus aircraft disposal, and civil aeronautics board certification of new transport routes.

CIVILIANS INCREASE SPENDING 6 PCT. IN 1944 TO 97 BILLIONS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—American consumers will have spent 97 billion dollars for goods and services by the end of 1944, the department of commerce estimated today. The total will be 6 per cent more than last year and fully 50 per cent more than in 1939, when 61 billion 700 millions was spent.

Despite war restrictions, the department said enough civilian goods were produced in 1944 to satisfy most of consumers' wants. There were "some inconveniences but no hardships."

Rising prices accounted for some of the increased spending, but the actual quantity of goods and services bought this year has been larger than in 1943.

Civilians spent 2 billion dollars more for food than they did last year, altho prices averaged slightly less than in 1943, the department reported.

The consumers laid down 9 per cent more money for clothes than in 1943, but because there was a 7 per cent rise in prices, the quantity was little changed.

DECEMBER CORN, BARLEY CLIMB IN UNEVEN MARKET

December corn advanced 2½ cents a bushel yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade to a new peak of $1.16¾ a bushel on short covering. Other corn futures were unchanged to ¼ cent higher. December barley rose 3¼ cents, also to a new high, tho deferred contracts were fractionally lower.

December wheat gained ¼ cent, but deferred deliveries weakened to close ⅛ to 1¼ cents lower, July leading the decline. Oats lost ⅛ to ⅛ cent. Rye was ⅛ cent lower to ¾ cent higher, the rise being in December. Trade in December futures ends today and deliveries by sellers must be made by Dec. 30.

Brokers said the tightness in the December contract arose almost entirely because a large part of the corn received in Chicago is too wet for delivery on the current future.

AM. SUGAR VOTES DIVIDEND OF $3; PAID $2 YEAR AGO

Directors of American Sugar Refining company yesterday declared a year-end dividend of $3 on common stock, payable Feb. 2. The preceding payment was a year-end disbursement of $2 last February.

Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., voted an extra dividend of 25 cents to make total payments this year 75 cents, the same as in 1943.

Barlow & Seelig Manufacturing company authorized a 10 cent dividend, which brought the total for 1944 to 50 cents, compared with 10 cents last year.

STOCK MARKET BREAKS ON WAR DEVELOPMENTS

Sales Total Near 1½ Million Shares.

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—Prices broke all along the line in today's stock market after an early advance in the rails faded. The selling fell off in the final hour and most of the leaders showed small recoveries from the lows. The market apparently swung to a bearish interpretation of long war prospects in the light of fuller disclosure of the power of the German counter-offensive in the west.

Impact of the war news was heavier by reason of the market's less favorable technical position after the rise in the first half of December to seven year peaks, it was said.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite dropped 0.5 point to 57.6, its widest loss since Nov. 14. The rail average declined 0.7. Transactions totaled 1,482,500 shares compared with 1,282,930 Tuesday. Of 933 issues traded, 598 declined, 154 advanced, and 181 were unchanged.

Off a point or more were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Great Northern, American Smelting, Douglas Aircraft, Chrysler, and Sears-Roebuck.

RAIL BONDS MIXED.

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—A wave of selling of the active rails in the bond market today brought losses to numerous recent gainers. Enough underlying support, however, made the trend irregular and at the end a scattering of advances was recorded. Turnover declined with the selling, aggregating $13,291,100, against $16,027,200 Tuesday.

Baltimore and Ohio loans were prominent in the downturn, some giving up as much as 2 points of recent advances. The B. & O. stamped convertibles were off a point at 56⅝. Milwaukee adjusted 5s lost ¼ at 18¾ on sales of $1,026,000, face value. Great Northern 4s slipped 4¼ to finish at 117.

Bucking the decline were North Western 4½s, up ⅛; Lehigh Valley stamped 4s, up ⅛; Missouri-Kansas-Texas first 4s, up 1½, and Frisco 4½s of 1978, up ⅝.

Other corporate loans and foreign issues moved narrowly.

CHICAGO LIST LOWER.

Prices lost some of Tuesday's gains yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange in turnover of 36,000 shares. Heavily traded issues included Chicago corporation, unchanged; New York Central, down ⅝; Montgomery Ward, down ¾; and Peabody Coal, up ⅛. Five issues attained new peaks for the year, among them New York Central, which reached 23⅛ before slipping back a point at the close.
